Indian summer

THE mercury is set to rise to 25°C across the Costa del Sol this weekend. The blast of heat will be most intense on Sunday, as temperatures soar 5 degrees above the normal seasonal high for November. It comes after an abnormally dry autumn so far, although the chilly weather is expected to return by Tuesday.

Murder charge

A 64-YEAR-OLD ex-Legionnaire has been sentenced to 20 years in prison for killing a police officer on the Costa del Sol.

The verdict comes after a short trial in which it emerged that the accused, named as Julian YL, suffers from bipolar syndrome.

The incident occurred in Torremolinos, after Julian went to the home of the victim, a retired National Police Inspector, before a scuffle broke out on the doorstep.

He then produced a 25-centimetre machete and stabbed the other man 16 times in full view of a neighbour who he instructed to "call the police," before sitting down next to the dead body.

Investigators demand fresh probe

By Kat Ashton

Prosecutors have demanded that a case which saw a pair of Colombian trespassers shot dead when they broke into an Alhaurin de la Torre farm be reopened.

Just a year after Lucia Garrido was murdered in the pool of Finca Los Naranjos where she lived with her daughter, her ex-partner Manuel Alonso killed two men on the same plot of land.

Alonso, who moved onto the farm after Lucia's death, allegedly gunned the intruders down after they jumped a perimeter fence armed with weapons.

The case was initially dismissed as he claimed that he acted in self-defence, but was reopened several years later when an alleged link to drug trafficking emerged.

Police concluded that the Colombians had come to the farm with five or six others to retrieve a large amount of cocaine that was stashed there, which the defendant later disposed of.

Officers claimed that the accused was aware of a potential attack on the property and placed himself in the best position to shoot them, before moving the drugs to another location.

But the case was dismissed for a second time due to a lack of evidence.

Detectives have now insisted on a new probe since he could not have acted in self-defence if he knew they were coming.

Investigators have revealed that the weapons had been strategically placed inside the farmhouse, as if the man was anticipating a raid. The accused is also said to have revealed there had been another attempted break-in at the property two days earlier, but failed to report it at the time.

A police official said that the circumstances surrounding the death of Lucia Garrido a few months earlier also remain suspicious.

Missing mother's family vow to fight on

EXCLUSIVE

By Matt Ford

IT is two years since Scottish mother-of-one Lisa Brown vanished on the Costa del Sol, but her family remain determined to uncover the truth.

"Our campaign will continue for however long it takes and we will go to any lengths possible.

"Lisa would never leave her son and all evidence speaks for itself, so we know she's no longer with us and that is something that is very difficult to say and something that we'll never get used to saying," said Lisa's sister Helen Jordan, 51.

The milestone comes as Lisa's family released balloons after travelling to Spain to mark the date.

Investigators launched a fresh search earlier this year amid suspicions that her body was dumped at sea after she was killed, while former boyfriend and prime suspect in the case Simon

British conman arrested

A BRITISH man alleged to be one of the most wanted conmen in Europe has been held by police on the Costa del Sol.

The 53-year-old is believed to have been involved in a €4million tax fraud scheme in the UK.

He had reportedly been using the alias Jean Paul Dalton, and is believed to be wanted Briton Paul Kemp. The fugitive is reported to have created several companies, which defrauded the British tax office out of €4.2 million between 2003 and 2008.

Mr Kemp allegedly fled the UK to avoid prison and went into hiding under the names Jean Paul Dalton and Marcus Laine.

Spanish police did not reveal the man's name but confirmed he was born in Canterbury in 1964.

Crisis call held back

SPANISH FACTS OF LIFE... 35

THE Camino de Santiago, also known as the Way of Saint James, has been one of the world's most important religious pilgrimages for centuries, but its popularity has surged in recent years, writes Kat Ashton.

Holy moly!

THE origin of the Camino de Santiago stretches back to the ninth century, when the tomb of Saint James the Great was discovered in Santiago de Compostela.

Legend claims that the remains of the revered apostle were carried by boat from Jerusalem to be buried in the Galician capital.

Since then, millions have flocked to pay their respect to the apostle in the city's cathedral and many churches, monasteries and villages were built around the route.

However, the popularity of the journey began to fade during the 14th century as a result of wars, disease epidemics and natural disasters.

The route began to regain its appeal during the 19th century, but it wasn't until the 1980s, when the Council of Europe declared the site the first European Cultural Route, that the pilgrimage began to surge in popularity once more.

STUNNING: The remains of Saint James the Great are believed to be buried in the Santiago de Compostela cathedral.

Now people from across the globe flock to complete the Camino each year and nearly 300,000 pilgrims made it to Santiago de Compostela in 2016 alone.

While some still make the journey for religious purposes, many just take the opportunity to test their endurance and explore the Galician countryside.

A long and winding road

KNACKERED: Hikers abandon their shoes at 'world's end,' the pilgrimage's final destination.

THERE are many different paths that pilgrims can take to reach Santiago, including routes that start in other European countries such as France and Germany.

One of the most popular choices is the 'French Way,' which starts in Saint-Jean-Pied-de-Port on the French side of the Pyrenees border and making its way through Pamplona, Logroño, Burgos and Leon before it reaches Santiago de Compostela. The route stretches for over 800km and takes around a month to complete.

The true end of the Camino however actually lies at the Cabo Finisterre cape near the Galician fishing village Fisterra. True devotees tackle this extra 100km stretch from Santiago to worship in front of a sacred image of Christ and see the 'World's End.' It has also become tradition for travellers to abandon their destroyed walking shoes here or burn them in fires.

Born to be a star

SHE'S the Marbella-born actress who appears set to conquer Hollywood.

And Stranger Things star Millie Bobby Brown is well on the way to achieving her dream after the second season of hit series Stranger Things amassed over a record million mentions on Twitter within 48 hours of it being released.

The 13-year-old, whose parents hail from Boumemouth, is said to be worth more than €5.5 million after the first season of the supernatural drama garnered 22 million viewers in the United States alone.

It comes after the starlet appeared on the cover of Teen Vogue and was named in Time Magazine's Influential Teens of 2017.

She has now signed lucrative deals to promote Calvin Klein and Converse products after spending the summer filming upcoming blockbuster Godzilla: King of Monsters alongside Oscar nominee Vera Farmiga and English screen icon Charles Dance.

She shared the runway with famous Spanish models including Rocio Crusset and Estela Grande at the glittering event presented by Hollywood star Elsa Pataky.

Hopping mad Playboy bunny mugged

A WELL-KNOWN Spanish glamour model has been robbed after having her clothes sliced open in Madrid. Wilma Gomez, 33, was at a train station when she realised that a brand new mobile phone and 600 USD were missing from her jacket.

But it was not all bad news for the 2007 Miss Playboy Spain, who currently stars on TV in Chile, as the stunner revealed that she was visiting her home country for a festive photo shoot. "I'll be on the cover of the Christmas edition of Playboy," confirmed the Mallorca-born bombshell. "The first time I did it was in 2008."

FOOTBALL mega star Lionel Messi's wife Antonella Rocuzzo appeared to accidentally reveal that the pair's third child will be a boy. Time to reflect

AS hundreds of thousands get ready to consider the futility of war and to proudly wear their poppies on Remembrance Sunday, people are still dying around the world.

Not every war is a formal declaration between two or more countries but in many ways, unofficial armed conflict is even worse as those taking part will often ignore what are known as the 'rules of war'.

There are no less than 44 recognised international armed conflicts where a minimum of 100 people were killed during the past 12 months and in a number of cases, such as Syria and Yemen, the conflicts are supported by foreign financial and military aid.

Representatives of the American government have recently made it clear that the only way to get North Korea to change its ways is by a full invasion and the industry of war benefits the taxpayers and economies of America and most of the European Union.

This ignores the atrocities that have been committed by Daesh on innocent civilians and which sadly can never be contained as a single madman driving a vehicle into a random crowd can never be contained.

Sunday is a time to reflect on the past and the future and to hope that our leaders do what they can to protect as many innocent lives as possible.

Now we want to hear your views.

London calling!

A LARGE number of business representatives, mayors and politicians from the Costa del Sol headed to London to promote the region at the annual World Travel Market (WTM).

While attending the event in the UK capital, regional president Susana Diaz announced there had been estimated record tourist numbers to the region over the past year, with almost 30 million visitors arriving in total.

The Andalusian minister for tourism, Francisco Javier Fernandez, also revealed that the region expects a 6 per cent increase in tourists from the UK next year, with Malaga capital expected to attract up to 20 per cent more British visitors.

This follows on from the revelation that the Costa del Sol capital had already experienced a 22 per cent increase in British tourists in the first nine months of this year alone.

There was also talk on how the current political crisis in Cataluña would affect the tourism industry in the rest of the country, but Alvaro Nadal, Andalusian Minister of Energy, Tourism and Digital Agenda, remained hopeful.

"It's still early to talk about numbers, but there are many reasons to be optimistic," he said.

Many local mayors also

Best birthday present... ever!

EXCLUSIVE

By Karl Smallman

PROFESSIONAL photographer and bike enthusiast David Toms has come back home - to the Costa del Sol - just in time for his 53rd birthday which he celebrated yesterday (Wednesday).

A freak accident just over a year ago, when his bike hit a patch of sand, left him quadriplegic and his life changed for ever.

And since the awful crash David, his family and friends have been on a long journey via the intensive care unit in Malaga, a specialist spinal injury hospital in Toledo and, more recently, a residential facility in Granada.

But this week David moved to a fantastic facility this week in Alhaurin de la Torre that will offer him 24/7 care and daily physiotherapy to speed along his recovery.

CURRENTLY David receives no financial support from the state, apart from a minimal monthly amount for permanent disability, although the paperwork is currently in progress.

Cat survives cruel ordeal

OFFICERS from Spain's Guardia Civil are investigating youths who flung a cat from a second floor window in Torre del Mar, Malaga, and filmed it.

The police have identified the alleged abuser, aged 16, who already has a criminal record.

Although the cat survived the 15-metre fall a video of the incident sparked outrage on social media. At the start of the recording, that was widely circulated on WhatsApp and other social networks, the 14-year-old recording it and a third youth can be heard asking the 16-year-old not to do it.

But, amid laughter, they then encourage him to fling the cat from the balcony of the second-floor apartment into the street below.

Local Police from Velez-Malaga who visited the family home were told by an older brother of the alleged abuser that the cat "is alive and has not suffered physical damage."

Since the incident, believed to have been filmed on All Saints' Day, the mother of the boy contacted the Guardia Civil to complain about the harassment her son has since suffered on social media.

IRISH pop legend Ronan Keating dropped into Marbella with his family to host the second annual Ronan Keating and Global Gift Golf Challenge, Gala Dinner and Concert.

The weekend-long event kicked off with a welcome dinner, with Ronan and Spanish actress Maria Bravo, founder of the Global Gift Foundation, providing the star appeal.

On Saturday, the ex-Boyzone star singer took to the golf course for the Golf Challenge, which was won by Spanish Champion Angel Hidalgo. The day was rounded off with a charity dinner and gala, where Ronan treated guests to an 'unplugged' performance.

Among the guests were former international rugby player Thom Evans, football manager Harry Redknapp and actor Craig McGinlay.

Money raised from the event was donated to the Marie Keating Cancer Foundation and the Global Gift Foundation.

Hash gang held

FOUR people are to stand trial after police swooped to seize more than half a ton of hashish. The arrests come after an investigation which saw investigators raid two properties and a van containing 648 kilos of cannabis resin which was packed and ready for sale.

Two Spanish men, a Moroccan and a Libyan have been charged with drug trafficking and membership of a criminal organisation, while one has been accused of illegal weapons' possession.

DESTITUTE: The offending plants and (inset) Robbie.

Going to pot

A MAN from Scotland who claims he was falsely accused of running a cannabis farm in La Linea de la Concepcion, near Gibraltar, has been left homeless after police seized his passport.

Robbie Miller, aged 24, had left Scotland to find a job as a software engineer in Gibraltar and rented a room in a shared flat with a British biker.

A few days later, officers raided the property in La Linea de la Concepcion and discovered six large cannabis plants weighing seven kilos.

Robbie was held by police for 24 hours before the court seized his passport and released him on bail.

The judge allegedly wasn't interested in hearing his evidence that allegedly proved that the cannabis plants, which he claims must have been growing long before he arrived in the country, were nothing to do with him.

Robbie, originally from Hamilton in Scotland, has since been forced to sleep on a bench as he couldn't book another place to stay without a passport. He told media sources that he wanted to return back to Scotland as soon as possible, but this has also proved impossible with no passport and limited funds.

Mr Miller has hired a Spanish lawyer to represent him and hopes the judge will grant him an early hearing and dismiss the case as soon as possible.

ARGUABLY the best football manager that England never had, celebrated wheeler-dealer Harry Redknapp was guest of honour at a recent Costa del Sol charity evening.

He kindly agreed to speak to the Euro Weekly News about his life in football and his commitment to support charity whenever he can.

He and his wife Sandra used to keep a holiday property in Estepona which is how they first got to know Sandro Morelli, owner of the Villa Tiberio restaurant, and he was delighted to come over to support his friend in raising funds for Cudeca Hospice and the Red Cross.

Unfortunately, Sandra was unable to accompany him on this lightning visit which saw Harry return to the UK on Monday as she has just had an operation to remove a disc from her spine.

It was in the lap of the gods as to whether Harry would be able to come to Spain for the charity evening, but happily Sandra is now on the mend and he was able to make it.

Harry Redknapp is a genuinely charming and cheerful man who has been an incredibly successful manager after retiring as a player in 1979 before going on to manage over 1,000 games.

When asked whether he had one particular football success of which he was particularly proud, he explained "I have enjoyed all of my time in football. I took Bournemouth up from the fourth division, brought on a number of great international players whilst managing West Ham and had the pleasure of winning the

A natural charmer!

John Smith chats to irrepressible football legend Harry Redknapp

FA Cup against the odds at Portsmouth.

"Then with Spurs I had a great time with some super players who are still doing well in the Premier Division."

When asked if he felt any bitterness about the way in which managers are treated and can be sacked almost at a moment's notice, he was remarkably sanguine, "It's something we know and understand and having been involved in more than 1,500 matches as a manager, I consider it to be part of the job."

At the age of 70, he doesn't expect to return to high profile full time management although he does still give some advice to Yeovil Town and was for a short period of time the caretaker manager of the Jordan national team.

In a recent interview conducted by this writer with currently injured Birmingham City goalkeeper, David Stockdale who was Harry's first purchase for the 'Blues,' the footballer said that he had nothing but praise for his management style but accepted that this was the way that football worked nowadays and success was everything.

Working occasionally with his son Mark, Harry is involved in building both social and commercial housing in the Dorset area and he is currently happy with his life in the exclusive area of Sandbanks (Poole) as he has little direct contact with those in the current world of football, preferring instead to enjoy life with Sandra and helping to raise funds for the Southampton-based charity Leukaemia Busters.

Harry Redknapp is a charming and pleasant man who has enjoyed some 50 years in football and has achieved a great deal in his long career.

A CONTESTANT on the Spanish version of reality TV show Big Brother has been sent home over accusations he sexually assaulted a female co-star.

The show's producers reportedly got the police involved after evicting Jose Maria Lopez Perez, 24, and his on-screen girlfriend Carlota Prado Alonso, who hails from Estepona.

Officers in Madrid confirmed that one of the programme directors had made a formal complaint but revealed they had yet to hear from the woman in question.

The producers apparently have video footage of the incident which they have handed over to the police to help in their investigations.

The event in question, which supposedly took place during a boozy party, was not shown during the programme.

Parent TV station Telecinco announced that it had decided to expel

Jose Maria from the show for his "intolerable behaviour."

They also felt it appropriate for Carlota to leave following the recommendations of a team of psychologists, but announced she is welcome to return to the show on Thursday.

Jose Maria met 24-year-old Carlota while on the show and quickly declared his love for her on camera.

Carlota was labelled 'the toughest girl in Malaga Province' by one Spanish media outlet as she claimed she once had to confront a violent customer with a knife while working at a nightclub in Marbella.

A MALAGA-BASED construction company has been hired to build the new administrative headquarters at the ancient city of Machu Picchu in Peru.

The construction firm Guamar was awarded the €1 million contract by the Peruvian government's Environment Department, after having previously been hired to complete €18 million worth of development projects in the country.

The new building will have five floors and stretch across 1,800 metres. All the site's administrative duties will be performed in the new centre, as well as those for the Manu National Park which surrounds the tourist hotspot. The headquarters will also be built using the latest earthquake-resistant technology.

Machu Picchu is a 15th century Incan citadel built nearly 2,500 metres above sea level in the Andes Mountains in Peru. It has been on the UNESCO World Heritage List since 1983 and was named one of the new Seven Wonders of the World in 2007.

The new administration centre has a high symbolic value and Antolin Martin Rubio, the president of Guamar, said that they were proud to have been awarded the contract as it will be a "landmark project for the country."

Life's a beach!

SANDY STRIP: The beach will be the largest of its kind in Europe.

PLANS to build Europe's largest man-made beach in Spain have been approved.

Construction firm Grupo Rayet has been given the green light to build Alovera Beach on the Spanish mainland, around 45 minutes from Madrid in the municipality of Alovera.

The €15.6 million project will boast a 25,000-metre-square lake and a 15,000-square-metre white sand beach and is expecting to receive 250,000 people a year.

Grupo Rayet's computerised images of what the project will look like also show an area for sailing and even has space for water slides.

Users will be charged €10 a head to use the facilities, which are expected to be ready in three years (2020) according to Grupo Rayet president Felix Abanades.

Suspected terrorist recruiter held

A MAN has been arrested in Valencia over suspected ties with Daesh.

The 47-year-old would allegedly relay messages from the jihadi organisation to potential recruits and aid in sending them to conflict areas.

Police also found evidence directly linking the accused to a 26-year-old man who carried out a suicide attack in Iraq, killing 33 soldiers.

It is believed the deceased would often stay with the Moroccan man in his home in Sagunto where he was exposed to terrorist propaganda, converting him to extremist ideologies.

The accused also allegedly continued his recruitment efforts over the internet and would provide closely guarded Daesh files to potential recruits, meet up with them in secret and teach them how to hide their tracks online from authorities.

He was also described as anti-social, and would generally avoid contact with people who did not follow his religion and ideals.

Since 2015 when the Spanish Home Office raised the terror alert to four, authorities have arrested 206 jihadi terrorists in Spain.

AN Andalucian council has launched a hate crime investigation after two women were told to leave a public pool for wearing burkinis.

A municipal pool in Granada allegedly ejected the two women despite the facilities allowing the use of the swimming garment.

The councillor for Human Rights, Accessibility and Education for Granada, Jemina Sanchez, said the department was made aware of the incident over social media and then opened an investigation when a written complaint was filed by a witness.

She added that if nothing is done about these sorts of actions "we are looking the other way and allowing hatred to grow from our silence."

"We work hard to clarify so that there can be no doubt that we do not allow attitudes which can promote hatred," Sanchez said.

While burkinis are permitted in municipal pools, dresses and other full length garments which can be a danger to swimmers by getting stuck in filters are not allowed.

That's a bit rich! Zara tycoon tops Forbes' ranking

AMANCIO ORTEGA has strengthened his position as the wealthiest person in Spain with a personal fortune in excess of €70 billion, according to the latest Forbes' Rich List.

It comes after the founder of Inditex fashion group - best known for its Zara chain of stores - briefly toppled Microsoft mogul Bill Gates to become the richest person on the planet in August this year.

The 81-year-old tycoon's assets are equivalent to the combined wealth of the 51 individuals who follow him in the annual Top 100 published by the Spanish edition of Forbes' magazine.

Second place on the 2017 list is occupied by Ortega's daughter and heiress Sandra Ortega Mera who is estimated to be worth €6.5 billion, while third place is taken by Mercadona president Juan Roig with €4.8 billion.

ROLLING IN IT: Amancio Ortega (inset).

The top 10 is completed by boss of hotel group Iberostar Miguel Fluxa (€3.6 billion), president of infrastructure giant Ferrovial Rafael del Pino (€2.9 billion), OHL construction chief Juan Miguel Villar Millar (€2.7 billion), Roig's wife and Mercadona vice-president Hortensia Herrero (€2.6 billion), casino magnate Manuel Lao (€2.4 billion), Mango founder Isak Andic (€2.3 billion), and security firm Prosegur head Helena Revoredo (€2.3 billion).

But the influence of the famously reclusive Ortega - who has a 59 per cent stake in Inditex, the largest textile group in the world, plus a property empire managed via Pontegadea Real Estate - is such that if he is removed from the list the average net worth of the top 100 falls from €1.58 billion to €890 million.

Only 27 spots are occupied by women, who have between them amassed €24.5 billion.

Dog attack horror

Victim has both legs amputated

A WOMAN is fighting for her life after being attacked by dogs in Galicia.

The 82-year-old from Covelo, Pontevedra, named as Maria Dolores AB, was set upon by two French mastiffs owned by a neighbour as she returned home from mass.

Horrified witnesses described how the animals bit her lower legs and scalp to the bone.

She was reportedly dragged for 30 metres and her injuries were so serious that surgeons were forced to amputate both her legs below the knees.

According to local media reports, the dogs had escaped from the garden of their owner's home, with police now probing the incident after it emerged that residents had complained about them being loose on several occasions.

The victim was taken to a hospital in Vigo where she remains in a critical condition.

One of the dogs is a pure French mastiff, also known as Dogue de Bordeaux and a breed considered potentially dangerous in Galicia, and the other a boxer cross, but neither had the mandatory microchip or health card.

Under Spanish law owners of dog breeds considered potentially dangerous, including rottweilers, pit bull terriers, and Staffordshire bull terriers must possess a mandatory licence and keep the animals muzzled and on a lead whenever in public.

‘We’re playing with democracy’

EX-CATALAN President Carles Puigdemont was released on bail in Belgium after the Spanish government issued a European arrest warrant in his name.

Puigdemont had fled to Brussels after Spanish authorities voted to impose direct rule on Cataluña following the illegal independence referendum on October 1.

Puigdemont, along with four of his ministers, handed himself into the Belgian authorities on Sunday but they were freed after a 10-hour hearing. The court will now decide whether to act on the warrant.

Catalan officials face up to 30 years in prison on charges of rebellion, embezzlement of public funds, sedition and disobedience.

Eight members of the former parliament have already been jailed following a hearing in Madrid, which Puigdemont refused to attend.

Meanwhile, in an article he wrote for a British newspaper, Puigdemont pointed out how the “leaders of this democratic project face the severest punishment possible - the same as for cases of terrorism or murder.

“The Spanish state must honour what was said so many times in the years of terrorism: end violence and we can talk,” he said. “We’re playing with much more than our futures: we’re playing with democracy itself.”

CAT-aluña?

A CAFE-BAR in northern Spain has stirred up a debate after placing a sign in its window allowing pets, but banning Cataluña pro-independence supporters.

The Tu Café bar in Gijón, Asturias, sparked outrage after hanging a sign in its window that said: ‘Pets are allowed... independence-seekers are not.’

A photograph of the poster has gone viral on social media. But a local resident, who asked not to be named said, “Personally, I think it’s a bit of fun and just a storm in a tea cup.”

Others have taken to the internet to question how the bar’s staff will be able to know if the pets themselves are supporters of independence for the embattled region or not.

Electricity bills surge

ELECTRICITY charges in Spain have soared by 12 per cent this year compared to 2016.

Bill payers have seen average prices rise up to €71.49 in October, a significant increase on September’s €66.76, according to official figures.

Reduced output from hydroelectric plants due to low water levels has reportedly forced companies to revert to the more expensive coal and gas.

Only 7.5 per cent of Spain’s energy has been generated by hydroelectric plants this year compared to 15 per cent in 2016.

Companies have also raised their prices as part of their service adjustments which has brought in €511 million so far this year.

Spain’s average bill is however lower than the UK’s, which is around €99.60 per month.

SIZZLING: Hooters is known for its fried food and scantily-clad staff.

What a hoot!

US chain keeps abreast of Europe

EYEPOPPING US chain Hooters has confirmed it is to open its first diner in Spain.

The raunchy brand is famed for its chicken wings and beer served by young waitresses in revealing outfits, which have earned it the self-proclaimed 'breastaurant' moniker.

And with more than 430 eateries in 28 countries, the first Spanish Hooters will soon open in Castelldefels, Barcelona, according to the company's Facebook page.

Hooters has come under fire for objectifying women due to its compulsory barely-there orange-and-white uniform consisting of tiny shorts combined with a cleavage-enhancing vest top, while the logo features an owl with its eyes replaced by nipples.

In the US, it has attracted further criticism for promotional events such as staff beauty pageants and calendars with photos of girls in various states of undress, while female applicants are reportedly asked to reveal their measurements during the interview process.

It comes as Director of Operations in Spain, Julio Arias, moved to dismiss claims that the restaurant was forced to seek an alternative to its original site in Viladecans after being slammed by feminist groups, insisting that the switch was due to 'space issues.'

Roaring success

By Anita Humphreys

THE President of the La Cala de Mijas Lions Club, Julie Barry, recently presented Ricardo Aguilera Rodriguez, the new President of Encina Laura, with a cheque for €654.

He thanked the Club for their generosity and their continued support over many years. The money has been used to install a wall of mirrors so that one of the rooms can be used as a dance studio. The centre is based in Alhaurin de La Torre and currently helps 19 mentally handicapped individuals. They produce a wonderful range of products and will have a stall at the Lions Christmas Fayre on December 3.

The Christmas Fayre will be held at the Tamisa Golf

Hotel on December 3 starting at 11.30am. Stalls, Costa Soul singers and Father Christmas will all be there.

On December 9 at the El Olivo restaurant in La Cala, their spectacular Christmas Dinner and Dance event will take place with music from the fabulous Revival band. Tickets at €45, which includes wine, beer and soft drinks until midnight, can be obtained from the Lions Shop in Calle Torremolinos 12 or by calling 677 059 061.

Poppy Appeal still on!

IN press reports about the closure of The Royal British Legion Benalmadena branch, it was stated that there would be no Poppy Appeal in the area.

What it should have said was there would be no Branch Appeal due to the decision to close the branch.

Individual traders have asked for kits, and neighboring branches have stepped forward to help where they can.

Tony Burns, Vice Chairman of District Spain South Committee, said: "It is a shame the branch had to close but we will do our best to ensure that those who want poppies shall have them."

Bank warns of growth slowdown

THE Spanish economy has steadily recovered over the past three years, allowing the government to be confident that it can meet financial targets set by the European Union.

The Bank of Spain however has indicated that unless the Catalan crisis is resolved quickly that economic growth could be threatened and in a worst case scenario be as low as 2.5 per cent against a forecast 3.1 per cent.

Check in and be weighed

By John Smith

AS airlines become increasingly more streamlined and cost aware, so they are anxious to become more efficient and two are now weighing passengers.

For years, those travelling on commuter helicopters in the USA were required to be weighed in order to ensure even distribution of people and baggage, but Air Samoa are now charging overweight passengers extra in order to affray fuel costs.

Now the concept has travelled across the Pacific and Atlantic to Europe and Finnair has started asking passengers flying out of Helsinki to pop on the scales with their hand baggage.

This is voluntary and the more rotund will not be charged extra but the concept could well be copied by airlines across the EU although at already busy airports like Malaga, the extra time taken may delay the introduction of personal weigh ins.

A spokesman for the airline explained that whilst it was possible for any airline to gauge the weight of any aircraft and checked baggage accurately, it had to rely on European Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) passenger standard weight estimates which assume that a male weighs 84.6kg, a female passenger weighs 66.5kg and the average child under-12 weighs 30.7kg.

By checking on the actual weight of passengers the Finnish can then produce its own averages with the hope that it may be able to reduce the amount of fuel needed for each flight.

Freixenet decides to stay

IN an about face, Freixenet the Catalan-based cava producer has decided to keep its headquarters in the province.

Now that the Spanish government has applied Article 155 and dismissed the Catalan parliament, the president of the Freixenet board has made it clear that there is now no longer any need to relocate which it had seriously considered.

Quote of the Week

It isn't so much where inflation is now but where it is going that concerns us," commented Mark Carney, Governor of the Bank of England after it raised interest rates 0.5 per cent.

High speed train shortlist

THE UK Department for Transport has shortlisted five companies for a £2.75 billion (€3 billion) contract to build trains for the new HS2 rail network. The winner will design, build and service some 54 new high-speed trains and one of those selected Patentes Talgo is Spanish with its head office near Madrid.

Prototype high speed train.

The high speed trains which should have a top speed 225mph are due to be ready to come into service by 2026.

After being criticised for giving lucrative rail contracts to overseas companies which may have resulted in British workers losing their jobs, the short list contains a number of companies with UK manufacturing bases. The fact that these companies have been short listed is important to them, but the tender will not be issued until next year and contracts awarded only in 2019.

» BUSINESS EXTRA

Hi-energy

ENERGY Company Red Eléctrica de España (REE) made a profit of €495.5 million in the first three quarters of the year.

This is 5.1 per cent more than in the same period of 2016 and is in line with company forecasts.

Job losses

UNEMPLOYMENT in Spain increased by 56,844 in October which is considered to be a positive result considering that October is traditionally a bad month, with the average figure nearer to 90,000 over the past 10 years. November figures however may increase due to the Catalan crisis.

Oil boost

REPSOL, one of the major Spanish oil companies, has reported a profit of €576 million (higher than forecast) for the third quarter of the year. Overall debt at the end of September had reduced to €6.97 billion, thanks to higher oil prices.

Senate demands help for Jordan

THE Senate, the Upper House of Spain's Parliament has signed a document urging the Spanish government to give financial support to the Kingdom of Jordan.

In addition, it wants Spain to demand that the European Union also gives economic assistance to Jordan which is being crippled by the cost of dealing with large numbers of Syrian refugees.

It is estimated that there are several hundred thousand Syrians claiming asylum in that country who have joined up to two million Palestinians, hundreds of thousands of whom live in refugee camps.

As Spanish stores join in BLACK FRIDAY AND CYBER MONDAY APPROACH

THE concept of a special day of discounts goes back to 1932 when a number of US businesses realised that people were bored on the day after Thanksgiving.

America stops for the Thanksgiving public holiday held on the fourth Thursday of November every year and the next day, almost by default, is taken as an extra holiday by millions of people.

This year Black Friday falls on November 24 and American stores see this as the start of the Christmas season with many taking advantage of the discounts to commence their Christmas (and in many cases Hanukkah) gifts.

For decades, this phenomena was kept the other side of the Atlantic but as more and more US corporations became involved in owning business in Europe, so the concept of Black Friday moved over and now it is yet another excuse for sales in the UK and more recently Spain.

Amazon, the online giant started to trail their Black Friday deals at the beginning of November and also include a deal of the day in the run up to that Friday, although they have in the past launched Black Friday a week earlier and run their offers for two weeks!

Retailers ensure that there are a number of bargains in store but in previous years there has been chaos as consumers arrive hours in advance of opening and push and fight in order to grab the relatively small number of real bargains available.

Someone is always ready to dream up a bright alternative and now we also have Cyber Monday where other companies offer their goods at discount online with the downside being your computer might crash but you won't be crushed.

BLACK FRIDAY:
Crowds gather.

Spain has come a little late to the party, but major chains and even some local stores are likely to participate although they tend to simply offer percentage discounts on items of clothing and electrical goods rather than making significant cuts on individual pieces seen in other countries.

OFFSHORE TAX HAVENS ARE BACK IN THE NEWS Paradise Papers hacked

THE hacking of a law firm based in an offshore tax haven, this time Bermuda, has highlighted the amount of wealth now estimated at €10 trillion lodged secretly around the world.

Even a 91-year-old woman and her 96-year-old husband are caught up in this investigation although a spokesperson for HM Queen Elizabeth II has made it clear the investment of £10 million (€11.25 million) in Bermuda and Cayman Islands is quite legal.

The United Kingdom is very much involved in these latest revelations as the law firm Appleby which is reported as being hacked is based in the Isle of Man with offices in the British Virgin Islands, Bermuda and the Cayman Islands, all British Overseas Territories and all with UK appointed Governors.

Britain's involvement with offshore tax havens has been long and for many years has attracted adverse reviews from countries such as the USA with stricter control only taking place recently.

When added to the fact that many British lawyers and fund managers are

QUEEN ELIZABETH has money in Offshore Tax Havens.

heavily involved in advising clients as to legal means of avoiding tax, Britain is certainly far from innocent in its overseeing of the activities of its Caribbean Territories in particular.

It isn't just the Queen who has taken advantage of the situation according to the latest revelations following the Appleby hack in what is now being called the 'Paradise Papers.'

It is suggested that the major shareholders in Arsenal and Everton, who have both worked together whilst making their money in Russia not only have investments offshore via Appleby but may also be sailing close to the wind with regards to rules concerning ownership of more than one Premier League club.

Others said to be involved include a close aid of Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau who has campaigned against tax havens as well as American billionaire and recently appointed US Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross who for years advised Donald Trump with many more names yet to be revealed.

The latest accusation is that the former mayor of Barcelona and current spokesman of the PDeCAT - which supports Catalan Independence - Xavier Trias Vidal de Llobatera has been a beneficiary of a family trust which had money in Switzerland for decades although he denies knowing about it.

The politicians in the Territories involved take the view that it is not their duty to collect tax on behalf of other larger countries and they are doing what they can to ensure the financial well-being of their fellow countrymen by keeping taxes to a minimum.

Following the major coverage of the previous 'Panama Papers' which resulted in many political resignations around the world, this latest scandal looks set to run and run.

Santander to reduce staff

BANCO SANTANDER is going to employ an independent company to advise it on how best to handle the staff it has inherited following the takeover of Banco Popular.

It has already confirmed that it intends to make redundancies in both bank's workforces and envisages the loss of several hundred positions over the next 12 months.

Having already closed 300 of the Popular branches and disposing of more than 2,500 staff soon after the takeover it now wants to try to integrate a number of the remaining inherited staff into its existing operation.

Santander now employs more than 200,000 staff in its combined Spanish and International branches which is a slight reduction in the workforce during 2017.

Government to review mortgage laws

WORK on legislation to bring Spanish mortgage rules in line with European Union directives is about to be undertaken which will give consumers greater protection.

It is expected that draft regulations will ensure that banks will be unable to evict homeowners who are in default on their loans as easily as they can currently and that there will be limits as to the percentage of default that has to be reached before action can be taken.

In addition, it is intended that companies will be prohibited from setting targets for those staff selling mortgages, as targets with commissions can sometimes encourage canvassers to allow those who can't afford repayments to be accepted.

Carrefour still continues growth

FRENCH supermarket group Carrefour continues to grow in Spain and is about to open its sixth store to remain open 24 hours a day.

Whilst the company has been opening superstores in suburbs of main towns and cities and even 'cash and carry' outlets Supeco, it is also looking to expand its gourmet Market outlets in affluent areas throughout Spain.

The new Carrefour Market Boulevard is described by the company as "one of the best supermarkets in Madrid" and is stocked with quality produce of the type that might be found in specialist departments in Harrods or Selfridges.

With 12,000 products ranging from fresh fish to sushi, quality cheeses and meats and a fresh bakery, the Market even includes dedicated eateries, as well as a fine wine cellar.

Supermarkets generate huge amounts of income for their shareholders and have to be increasingly more innovative and focused on target groups in order to ensure that they maintain and increase their market share.

American agency expects house prices to rise in Spain

COINCIDING with the decision by the government to change mortgage regulations, an American credit rating agency is forecasting a surge in Spanish house prices.

One of the three main agencies, Moody's has reviewed pricing and building in various European countries and whilst Spain is not at the top of the league, it believes that prices will rise on average by 8.6 per cent over the next three years.

The main jump is expected to be in 2018 at almost 6 per cent and will then slow down for the following two years.

The main drivers of the price rise are low interest rates, a stronger economy and a larger number of younger workers managing to find and retain employment according to the review.

Britain and Germany are the two leaders in growth of prices as well as new building, but Spain is certainly due to see some price hikes especially as there are likely to be more new buyers than new properties being built.

Prior to the crash, the construction industry was awash with cash and new builds were springing up all over the country, but many of these developments were never completed and although there is some sporadic new building, many buyers are having to look at older property.

I've never had much respect for politicians

LEAPY LEE SAYS IT

OTHERS THINK IT

BACK in the 60's I saw a number of the 'Old Boys' club members with their trousers down, both metaphorically and in reality. Well I remember a prominent London MP rushing up to me at a party. Clad in a string vest and very questionable Y-fronts, he implored me to "take over upstairs."

Apparently, the 'blonde' nymphomaniac he was endeavouring to satisfy had become too much for him. I didn't accept his offer I may add! Another told me he thought smoking marihuana was 'such fun!' No, I'm afraid politicians in general have never impressed me much.

There is one overriding problem with the elder male occupants of the Westminster power corridors. The majority went to public school. Students from these male-dominated institutions never really learned to mix with the female of the species. Their only experiences with the opposite sex were annual school dances and overbearing Nannies.

This, accompanied by the odd grope of the slightly more promiscuous young ladies from the local St Trinians, left women reduced to nothing more than subjects of locker room

humour and ribald banter in the dorms. The outcome of this attitude, resulted in the total absence of respect for those of a gender, they considered not only mere objects of sexual titillation, but also intellectually inferior and subsequently had no important standing in the male-dominated corridors of their future political ambitions.

Many of these elder statesmen on the benches fall into this category, and still consider Westminster nothing more than an extension of their public school education and debating societies. As attitudes change, and more and more women are elected into the house, these ex-public schoolboys are slowly becoming the dinosaurs of the political arena.

Frankly, apart from serious offences, racking up ancient knee brushings and somewhat innocuous schoolboy's sexist innuendoes, is a complete waste of time and energy. Time to get back to more serious issues, like running the country for example! Thank the Lord the Labour Party are also up to their proverbials, or else they would be using it as yet another weapon in their armoury of schemes and skulduggery to keep the government on the back foot till the next General Election!

Picked up a lovely piece of terminology this week; non-erotic cognitive distraction. This is the condition of ladies having their moment of intense sexual arousal being spoiled by suddenly remembering they'd missed a pedicure appointment, or something of that ilk. Apparently sufferers of this unfortunate 'malady' are encouraged to 'stay in the moment.' Stay with me luv, it'll only take a moment!

Keep the faith,

Remembrance Day at the Cenotaph.

By John Smith

THERE are two specific dates associated with the end of the First World War, one of which is permanent and the other changes each year.

People all across Britain will observe a two minute silence at 11am this Saturday (the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month), which is the time and date when hostilities formally ended after more than four years of battle during what is now remembered as The Great War.

In memory of those who laid down their lives

The nearest Sunday to November 11 is chosen as Remembrance Day where people gather together to remember and mourn the dead in all wars, although in Britain and here in Spain, more emphasis is given to those who died during the 20th and 21st centuries.

In London, next Sunday will see the usual massive ceremony at the Cenotaph which will be attended by members of the Royal Family, representatives of the Commonwealth and Overseas Territories, politicians, veterans of various conflicts and serving military together with a huge audience of on-lookers.

Due to their advanced age, the Queen and Prince Philip will play a reduced role in the laying of wreaths as they cannot be expected to spend hours standing around in what is invariably a chilly morning.

As well as the main service in London, the laying of wreaths takes place all over the UK as well as the Commonwealth and there will also be many parades embracing ex-servicemen now settled in Spain plus the usual services in Gibraltar.

Poppies are worn as a symbol of respect and tribute on Remembrance Sunday and Armistice Day and funds raised from their sale go towards assisting ex-servicemen through the Royal British Legion.

The original concept of the wearing of poppies in remembrance - which was inspired by a Canadian military officer and poet who wrote 'In Flanders Fields' - actually came from America and was adopted by the American Legion before the concept came to the UK in 1921 from France.

Behind the poppy

IN the spring of 1915, Lieutenant Colonel John McCrae, a Canadian doctor who had just lost a friend during the First World War (1914-1918), was inspired to write the poem 'In Flanders Fields' after seeing poppies growing in battle-scarred fields where little else would grow.

The poem inspired Moina Michael, an American academic, to make and sell artificial red poppies which were later introduced in the UK by a French woman, Anna Guerin.

In 1921, The Royal British Legion ordered nine million of the poppies and sold them on November 11 to commemorate the end of the Great War. The first year alone, the poppies raised £106,000, a staggering amount of money in those days, which was used to help First World War veterans.

Nowadays poppies are mostly sold in the UK, Australia, Canada and New Zealand to pay tribute to servicemen and women killed in conflict. The poppy is traditionally red to reflect the colour of field poppies and is considered a symbol of remembrance and hope.

Royal British Legion's Remembrance Sunday

By Benjamin Park

THE Royal British Legion (RBL) continues to provide a large number of services across Spain year after year.

Ahead of this Remembrance Day, we spoke to a few members of RBL branches around the country about what the occasion means to them and how they will be spending the day.

Jo Taylor, Chairman of the RBL Coin branch, first set-up the branch in 2006 having previously been a member of two other branches in Spain.

She spoke of how her branch chooses to honour loved ones on November 11.

"On Remembrance Day, we provide a bell service," she said.

"People who attend speak of loved ones they have lost and it's not just in the First World War, we have people who speak about loved ones they have lost in Iraq, Afghanistan and other wars too.

"After people have told me of their loved ones, I read a piece about them and we hold a short moment of silence. We try to keep the service both public, but private at the same time."

Steve Taylor, who served in the Royal Air Force, was first a member of the RBL in Oxfordshire but transferred his membership to Mollina when he moved to Spain 10 years ago, where he is now Chairman.

He said: "I have attended many Remembrance Day services in and out of uniform both in the the UK and many overseas locations.

"It is not only about the First World War but every loss of life up to today."

Dave Punshon, a member of the Mollina branch, said: "Though I never served in the armed forces, my father was a standard bearer and founder member of the legion club in my home town.

"As he died when I was 22, Remembrance Day is a time of reflection on two counts."

TECH FOR THE TIMIDPedal
power

E-BIKE batteries work hard, so they're expensive. And they're heavy.

Postmen where I live use a €500 e-bike with a monstrous lead-acid battery; not the way for the rest of us to go.

Most bikes use lithium-ion batteries, which recharge for just a few cents overnight and will take you 30 kilometres or more depending on your own pedal-power and hills. E-bikes don't (yet) generally recharge downhill.

For mega-trips you might even consider carrying a second battery - but beware of that extra weight.

How often you can recharge your expensive battery depends on how you treat it. Like any lithium-ion, it dislikes total discharges.

So treat it well with plenty of shallow charging and discharging and I can't resist saying it, you'll get hundreds of cycles.

On yer bike with a battery boost

In an era of batteries with everything, Terence Kennedy asks if tiny motors can get us back on two wheels.

WE all know Holland is as flat as the proverbial tortilla. Indeed, my Dutch wife's home town even advertises its 80-metre 'mountain.'

So it's all the more surprising then in a country where cycling is so embedded, that last year for the very first time, the 'flat-earth' Dutch bought more e-bikes than those conventional clunkers.

Electrically-assisted bicycles, to give them their full name, are conquering the market at nearly 10 per cent growth a year, say the experts. Annual European sales have hit more than a million now and rising, and the world's main e-bike producer China already has some 220 million on its roads.

So when you 'get on yer bike' these days, should it be battery-assisted? Granted there's a fairly hefty entry price: perhaps €700 for a modest machine, over €3,000 for one which could qualify you for the Tour de France if you don't get rumpled.

(In fact a French competition cyclist did just get caught using a hidden electric motor. He apparently did it 'to ease his sciatica.' Yeah, right).

E-bikes come in two flavours, essentially those which make you work (cheaper) and those which don't (time for a second mortgage).

The most popular are the 'pedal-assisted,' where you have to keep pumping or you'll grind to a halt. Depending on your budget and how hard you work, your battery may take you between 30 and 100 kilometres or more of actual powered cycling. Just don't expect a 'free ride' when you hit a hill; getting up it is a shared endeavour between you and your battery.

Simple e-bikes have three boost settings (one, two and 'wheeee!'), and of course the usual traditional gears, from three to 21. E-assistance from the motor (usually in the front wheel hub) cuts out past 25 km/h to avoid over-enthusiastic riders becoming strawberry jam at the bottom of a hill.

Fancier e-bikes have regenerative braking, a hand-throttle, can fold or for the true road warrior, can even pull a trailer full of batteries.

As with electric cars, some governments now subsidise e-bikes as part of their 'greening' policies.

So should you boost your pedal-power? As many of us know the European mainland is generally more bike-friendly than, say, the UK where unseating cyclists can be a national sport.

Our climate is conducive, that initial 'whoosh' as you pull away from cyclists on their prehistoric bikes is gleeful, and there's nothing to rival the wind in your hair and the insects in your mouth.

And simply as physical exercise, it's certainly a lot better than my previous regime: first-thing every morning up-down-up-down-up-down, then open the other eyelid...

THERESA MAY 'begged for help' and the UK press has been inundated with tales of sexual shenanigans in Hollywood and Westminster.

First up, Hollywood. That people are no longer willing to accept disgraceful, predatory, controlling behaviour is welcome news and long overdue. Yet it seems that any accusation is immediately taken at face value. The guilt of the accused is automatically taken for granted, and mob justice prevails.

But shouldn't we be careful as a society? Historically, creative people often weren't very moral or very nice. Caravaggio, the painter, killed a love rival. Richard Wagner: an anti-Semite and serial adulterer. Byron: sexually very exploitative, apparently. If we reject the creative work of these people, aren't we depriving ourselves of something valuable?

Kevin Spacey is generally considered a fine actor. But should his career be destroyed over alleged incidents way back while maybe drunk? At the time of writing, they don't seem to compare with Harvey Weinstein's behaviour which appears to justify all the condemnation it's attracted.

Many of our own outstanding actors in the past led lives that were often controversial. If we're only prepared to accept the artistic creations of sexually well-adjusted, blameless individuals then our films, novels and other creative works could become quite bland too.

As for Westminster, MPs warn of "wild rumours" fuelling a witch hunt worse than the expenses scandal. And following that scandal, who wanted to become an MP? As a group, they're despised, distrusted and discredited.

Now only a few public-spirited individuals, the ambitious with sufficient outside income, and an army of incompetents fill the benches. Is it surprising our Brexit performance's been so pathetic?

Whilst in no way condoning sexual harassment by politicians of young aides and others fearful for their careers, it seems to me the few decent MPs left will be subject to another witch hunt. And there can't be many people without some incident in their past they'd rather forget!

After this lot of 'sinners' has been hounded out, who'll be left to deal with the single-most important challenge facing the UK in recent times?

your password?

I'M sure you know what I mean. That moment, no that dreaded moment, at the supermarket checkout, when you've put the password for your card into that hand held device, only for it to display everybody's nightmare phrase - password incorrect. You chance a guilty look behind and see the queue of shoppers, trolleys twitching with intent, growing by the second and all staring angrily at you, daring you to get it wrong for a second time.

What a nightmare passwords are. James Bond never seems to have a problem remembering or cracking them. He sees something once and that's it, he remembers it forever, well at least until the end of the two-hour film.

Yesterday I had a little time to spare and got to wondering, as you do, how passwords first came about? Unbelievably they've been around for a long time, there's one at the start of Shakespeare's well-known play about that Danish Prince, Hamlet.

But it seems that the real culprits were those Ancient Egyptians. Apparently, they had to give a password for getting into certain important places, having to negotiate their way past guards with seriously pointy spears.

When it comes to passwords, I thought that I was being clever by keeping them simple - 12345 or even, brilliantly I thought, password - but they are the most popular passwords of all.

But, what if we all change our passwords to 'Incorrect' then when we forget them, the machine will simply remind us! Crack that code if you can James Bond!

TV Couch Critic

Attenborough serves up a not-to-miss blue treat!

TELEVISION highlights don't come much bigger than The Blue Planet 2, (BBC One, Sundays).

Laid back, knowledgeable and understated, David Attenborough delivers a feast of educational beauty that is inspiring, humbling and certainly never dull. Dolphins that surf 'for the fun of it' and giant trevallies that leap from the sea to snatch birds mid-flight, some scenes are reminiscent of the racer snake in last year's Planet Earth II offering. One that got away got a cheer in our household.

The distressing sight of walrus and their young crammed together on what's left of the icebergs and others desperately trying to find a piece of ice to rest on was sobering, given the Arctic has lost 40 per cent of its ice in the last 30 years.

It's a hope that the powers-that-be find a way out of the world's complacency in order to take action before it is too late.

This truly is one not to be missed. The Great British Bake Off (Channel 4, Tuesday) appeared to have survived the controversial quarter final eviction of 'fans' favourite' Liam Charles, as well as Noel Fielding's fridge gag, but the grand final was still bestowed with one last gaff.

The more dedicated Bake Off fans may well have been alert to Prue Leith's error in tweeting the winner 10 hours before the programme was screened, citing her lack of time-zone knowledge as she was in Bhutan at the time.

The tweet was quickly deleted and despite this final faux pas Bake Off appears to have completed the move from the BBC without too much trouble with viewing figures up.

For the record, Sophie was crowned champion with appearances on This Morning and Sunday Brunch assured.

Is there any chance Weatherfield police could ask the local council to put CCTV up in Coronation Street

ATTENBOROUGH: Sunday feast.

(ITVI) given it appears to be the biggest crime hotspot since Oxford in the times of Inspector Morse.

Having had the contents of a factory emptied in broad daylight, the great 'non-existent-flat' scam that left residents owed thousands - not to mention murders in the street and bodies under Gail's converted garage 'cameras would definitely assist investigations.

Additionally, maybe the increasing body count at the hands of current 'businessman' Phelan, who appears immune to police interest, would also cease. We live in hope.

Having been a Forces' child, I looked forward to the life on an army base abroad on The Last Post (Sunday BBC One), but the reality I recall is very different to the programme written by Peter Moffat and based on his own childhood memories.

Set in 1965 on a British military base in Aden, a port city in southern Yemen, it has lots of weekly drama with kidnappings and killings galore.

I cannot decide whether to feel sorry for Ed's wife Alison, played wonderfully by Jessica Raine (the slutty one) who is constantly drunk whatever time of day. However, she makes me laugh with her complete disregard for social niceties with the other wives and constantly tries to lead astray newcomer Honor, the new captain's wife (the naïve, innocent one) played by Jessie Buckley.

Charming overall in its old-fashioned manner, it provides a view of how army life affects the wives as the military police try to reconcile the British Empire with the rise of the Swinging Sixties.

It will actually be 50 years on November 30 since Britain withdrew from Aden, the former Crown Colony.

LEGALLY SPEAKING

Cyclists - know the law

WE answer some common driving questions, kindly provided by members of the Guardia Civil based in Torrevieja, Costa Blanca, who set up the N332 website and Facebook page to help break down barriers.

ICYCLISTS: Must abide by rules of the road.

IT is probably safe to say that all road users have witnessed a bicycle rider going through a red light or riding on the pavement, a practice that many find frustrating, but always one that raises the same question, are cyclists allowed to do such things?

The simple answer is NO.

In terms of law, once a bicycle is being ridden it is classed as a vehicle and therefore covered by the same rules and laws as a car, a lorry, a bus, in fact any other vehicle on the road.

It is only when the rider dismounts and walks with the bicycle is it considered otherwise. In this instance, the situation means that the person has become a pedestrian. That is the same reason why cyclists cannot ride across zebra crossings, because we wouldn't expect a lorry to do that, and the rider must dismount before they do.

Listening to music using headphones or using a mobile phone when riding a bike are prohibited in the same way as they are for other vehicles. Consuming more than the prescribed limit of alcohol or using drugs is also not allowed, as a cyclist you are governed by the rules of the road. Just so you know what you are risking, let's have a look at some of the most common infractions.

- Not having a bell on your bicycle - 80€
- Faulty or no brakes - 80€
- Carrying an extra person on the bicycle - 80€
- Failing to stop at a traffic light - 200€
- Failing to give way at a junction - 200€
- Not having lights - 200€
- Having too many lights - 200€
- Failing to wear high visibility clothing between sunset and sunrise and in poor visibility - 200€
- Riding under the influence of alcohol - 500€

There are many other laws and infractions commonly committed by cyclists, as well as other road users of course. We will look at these in more detail in future editions, but for now, take note, you can indeed be fined on your bike and remember that one golden rule, when you are riding your bike, it is a vehicle and governed by the same rules and laws as every other vehicle.

Can I get my 3 per cent back?

Q. I sold my property in January for €42,000 and my solicitor held back 3 per cent of the selling price, which came to €1,260. I came back out this month and I asked her about it. She said, if I want that back, the Tax Office will ask for the other €900. Is this correct? I have paid my Form 210 taxes.

MC (Costa del Sol)

A. WHEN a non-resident sells her property in Spain, she must pay Spanish capital gains tax of 19 per cent on the profit she has made.

Your buyer filed Form 211 and paid 3 per cent of the price to the Spanish Tax Agency as a guarantee

David Searl

You and the Law in Spain against your capital gains tax. That is the €1,260.

If you had no profit, you can claim this back from the Tax Agency.

However, it seems you have made a profit and your lawyer has calculated your capital gains tax at €2,160.

So, if you try to recover your 3 per cent deposit, you will be charged a further €900 which, apparently, is what you actually owe.

Send your questions for David Searl through lawyers Ubeda-Retana & Associates in Fuengirola at Ask@lawtaxspain.com, or call 952 667 090.

A kiss is sexual assault? Oh please

SIR,

I read Leapy Lee's recent article in EWN issue 1687 and absolutely agree. This whole debacle has my eyebrows climbing my forehead and jaw dropping to my chest.

Tried to kiss me, says one, hand on knee, says another.

Please don't think I'm unsympathetic to reports of serious sexual assault, I'm not. However, claims of hugs, elbow holding, kiss on cheek will eventually have the knock on effect of stopping any physical contact between the sexes and mankind will resort to laboratories to procreate!

The march of feminism is being dealt a serious blow. People in positions of power who use their position to threaten or persuade minions for sexual favours are not the type of person we need to govern the country.

The whole Weinstein affair has opened floodgates. But what in the name of God were these girls thinking? Going to hotel rooms for auditions or work? Surely they're not that naive? Just look at the man! How else would

No home comforts

I HAVE for some years been paying €400 to €500 a month to rent a property in Spain. Rather than waste money like this, I would rather buy a cheap property that I can own. But I am now over 65 and as far as any Spanish lenders are concerned, I am one step from death so not worth lending to.

I live on my own. As well as a British state pension, I have a company pension, but it is difficult to save when I have to pay rent every month. I am not going to suddenly become unemployed, not going to have more children and don't smoke or drink, own my own car and have no dependents. I have no loans or credit cards. The loan would still be paid if I became injured or sick, and I am willing to take out life insurance.

But banks and lenders would sooner lend money to younger people who may default on them or not be able to pay for any number of reasons, and if a family, they cannot be turned out of a house. No wonder why there are still so many empty properties (including those owned by banks) in Spain.

that repugnant human being attract beautiful women except by force?

Anyway, I'm fed up with all these complaints. Put a Code of Conduct into place, get Human Resources to do their job, and get on with life.

The uniform (RAF)

I THINK of you! Wearing your suit of blue

So proud, so debonair, so strong
My heart would beat with so much pride

If then I had you by my side
But alas! The years have come between

The tears they flow, for what might have been

But think of tomorrow, not of the past,

Just remember, a love, that will always last.

Passengers held on return to UK

WHAT happened to freedom of movement within the EU????, should have just opened the exit door!!! Julio

This is what was voted for, stronger border controls, and until they have checked you through, legally you're not on British soil! They can refuse anyone from entry at this point, and send you back from whence you came. George R Carman

Brits wreck Benidorm hotel room

They should lock them up in Spanish prison for five years and ban them from ever returning to Spain again! They are an embarrassment to the British people! Disgusting cretins! Julie Jones Peel
Bet they don't behave like this in Russian hotels next year during the World Cup a week in a Russian prison and they will be crying for the British Embassy. Michael Hearne

They ought to have their passports confiscated, they are an embarrassment to decent people. We had a couple like this in our lovely hotel in Kefalos in July. Kenneth Bartram

What a bunch of pathetic, childish, mentally deranged idiots! They should be locked up and made to pay every penny it costs to repair that room. Ellie
I agree with Ellie they should be locked up what a disgrace.

Not all English people are like that but we all get

Comments from EWN online

tarred with the same brush.

Totally outraged get a life lads, would you do this in England?

I don't think so idiots. Lesley

At least 27 dead in church shooting in America

When oh when are the American people going to wake up. Tell the President to start protecting the population by legislation. Jack Lawlor

But don't touch the gun laws the second amendment protects them. More people die in America than in the war on terror through the stupid gun laws. Gary Patrickson

Teens throw cat from second-floor window

Seems as if the mother is as bad as the son. If my son had done that he would have gotten a good hiding from me. Gerrie Lewis

And the mother is upset that her little brat kid is being harassed on social media! He deserves a lot more than that! how about some punishment being handed out by the Guardia! Christine van Baten

I hope the people who did this get their just desserts. These people should be fined heavily and also put into prison. Carol Patricia Nichols

Arrest warrant issued for sacked Catalan leader

Just proves want to be dictators, can't just take over without agreement of the country the people or an election,

Spain was only looking after all of its citizens, He was only interested in himself.

Viva España. Robert B Johnston

It was a coup d'etat by avaricious elected individuals to try to remove one of Spain's most profitable areas. Cataluña is responsible for 20 per cent of Spain's GDP... the riches that abound in this area were funded by all of Spain not just from this area and built up over many generations... it was a money and power grab that could cost the perpetrators their liberty for a very long time... they deserve what they get for fooling the people into believing that they were acting in the interest of Cataluña... they are servants of the state of Spain. Mike Aucott

Free country?

I AM very concerned about the situation in Cataluña. How on earth was an illegal referendum allowed to happen? If Spain is so set on it remaining part of the country, why were they allowed to have their own police force plus TV and radio stations in their own language in the first place? Why should they not be allowed to form their own little country - I just feel so sorry for them!

Wendy Chisholm, Arroyo Medina, Almeria

Bright idea

WITH all the facilities on the Costa del Sol's beaches, including gymnasiums, massage beds and showers, isn't it time councils started to install changing rooms as well? There would only need to be three or four near the showers, with gaps at the top and bottom to prevent any funny business!

Name withheld, Fuengirola

Get a grip

SORRY Viv Forbe (Letters 1687), but we very much should be afraid of human-led global warming, which is a scientifically-proven FACT! And especially here in Spain, where we are running out of water at an alarming rate. Try reading some scientific reports on the issue rather than Fox News or whatever and maybe your opinion will change!

Spanish movies

HOLLYWOOD has been graced by a number of Spaniards over the years. From Penelope Cruz and Antonio Banderas, to director Pedro Almodovar among countless others, Spanish cinema has a lot to be proud of. Here are five of our favourite all-time Spanish movies.

• All About My Mother (1999)

What many consider to be director Pedro Almodovar's greatest film, Oscar-winning All About My Mother tells the desperately sad story of a grieving mother, Manuela, who is in search of her transvestite ex-husband to tell him of the passing of their son.

• The Orphanage (2007)

Starring Belen Rueda and Fernando Cayo, The Orphanage tells the story of former orphan Laura, who decides to raise her adopted son Simon at the former orphanage where she was raised herself. When Simon disappears, Laura feels the presence of other people in the house and tries to unravel the mystery.

• Pan's Labyrinth (2006)

Set in the falangist Spain of 1944, a young girl, stepdaughter of a sadistic army officer, escapes into an eerie but captivating fantasy world where she is told that she is a princess, but must prove her royalty by surviving three difficult tasks. If she fails, she will never get to see her true father, the king, again.

• The Sea Inside (2004)

Starring Oscar winner Javier Bardem, The Sea Inside tells the factual story of Ramon Sampedro and his 30-year battle to win the right to euthanasia and his own right to die.

• Open Your Eyes (1997)

A very handsome man, Cesar, finds the love of his life, played by Penelope Cruz. Unfortunately, Cesar suffers a terrible accident and needs to have his face rebuilt by surgery after it is severely disfigured.

Not remembering how it happened he goes on a journey to find the truth.

Penélope Cruz.

YOUR STARS

FOR NEXT 7 DAYS

AQUARIUS (January 21 - February 19)

A meeting midweek could mean a change to your finances for the better. In the short term, it may be necessary for you to rearrange money and appointments but try not to be too put out. Change is perhaps something that we become less tolerant of after a situation has gone on for a time.

LEO (July 24 - August 23)

Are you still patting yourself on the back for that recent achievement? Socially, this is a lovely week when old friendships are strengthened and new acquaintances prove to be relaxing. It is another mellow week but one in which you seriously consider making a major change.

PISCES (February 20 - March 20)

There is so much that has come to light in the past few weeks. It is no wonder that your mind is reeling. All will become clear in the weeks ahead and this cannot be rushed. However, there is a need to look after your health and get out in the fresh air. Any thought of joining a walking club or health group should be pursued.

VIRGO (August 24 - September 23)

Be your charming self this week without pushing too much. A natural approach when you are seeking a response is the best course of action. Simply being in the right place and under someone's gaze is all that is required. Are you getting itchy because an offer is not forthcoming? Well, if you absolutely must, then get a little bird to whisper in their ear.

ARIES (March 21 - April 20)

A pleasant surprise makes you a little more optimistic midweek. It is possible for you to take on negativity too quickly. The next time something does not go according to plan, hold fire. It is amazing what a little time and distance will solve.

LIBRA (September 24 - October 23)

It is clear that you really love your hearth and home but, every now and again, there is a small voice calling. The good things in life appeal and, to have these, an effort is involved. Do not underestimate the amount of pleasure that you will enjoy when putting in that extra effort. It does, after all, involve other people. Some of those people prove to be quite fascinating.

TAURUS (April 21 - May 21)

Although last week was not run at the pace anticipated, now the pace certainly picks up. Finances are still firmly on the agenda, but this time you will be able to deal on a more relaxed basis. A contact made recently gives you the opportunity not only to make some money but also to enlarge your circle of friends.

SCORPIO (October 24 - November 22)

Having put in extra effort to bring a zing into your life, it is important that you keep the impetus going. This is not only good for your health and wealth, but also your mind. Although trying something new brings a few odd remarks your way, try not to be side-tracked.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)

Make a point of putting on a happy face and your mood will stay high. There is still some more to be done to improve your social life and a recent offer of charity work may be just the thing. Avoid restricting the sort of folk who you are willing to mix with. Cultural differences apart, it is quite an eye-opener to find out how others live and think.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 - December 21)

There is still a strong accent on family matters and getting things sorted out. The way ahead is clear. If you are able to persuade someone that an idea was theirs and not yours, so much the better. Being in a practical mood serves you well because it is possible to get a lot done in the next few days. The weekend, however, is another matter.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)

Being considerably more relaxed about those things which cannot be changed has taken a weight from your shoulders. It is also easier to understand why others have taken this approach in the past.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 20)

Your mind is still sharp this week and there are many questions that you would like answered. Doing a bit of research proves fruitful and also quite amusing. A recent contact may not come up with the proposition hoped for, but realise that it is still early days.

There is, however, a balance to be found. Don't be put off by people who have become sloppy in their approach because this is not going to affect you.

Trivia Fact

Goldfish can't close their eyes as they have no eyelids.

Finding your skin type

By Sally Underwood

SKIN is fascinating. The body's largest organ, skin generates itself every 28 days, constantly renewing to keep our bodies protected from external aggressors like bacteria and UV rays.

Its many layers also help regulate body temperature, maintain the body's balance of fluids, sense pain and absorb the impact of any knocks or hits.

And while the skin on our bodies is thick and largely takes care of itself, the skin on our faces is much thinner than elsewhere on our bodies, around a fifth of the thickness of that on our arms, legs and chests. It also contains far more sebaceous glands - the glands which produce oil - meaning the skin on our face is oilier than elsewhere, but conversely can become dry because of its thinness.

TAKE CARE:
Knowing your skin type will help you find the best products to keep it looking healthy.

“Regular cleansing and moisturising is good for your skin.”

We all know we can help make our skin look better by regularly cleansing, exfoliating and moisturising our skin, but knowing what skin type you have is the first step in choosing the right products and getting the results you want.

With a huge range of skincare products on the market it can be a baffling choice in the pharmacy or supermarket, with many of us simply picking up the same thing over and over again without thinking about it too much.

If you aren't getting the results you want though, it may be worth considering whether you are using the right products for your skin. Below is a guide to knowing what type of skin you have.

There are four main skin types. Dry skin produces less oil and will have an overall rough and dull appearance, while oily skin offers the reverse problem with a greasy shine and visible pores.

Combination skin will present dry patches on the cheeks with oily areas around the nose and forehead and normal skin will have fine pores and be neither too oily or dry.

SOFT SKIN: Face masks are a great way of getting rid of dry skin.

Get masked off

FACE MASKS have been one of 2017's biggest beauty trends, seeing a whole host of celebrities take to Instagram to share snaps of themselves covered in the stuff.

Because while masks have been around for years - mainly in the form of clay or charcoal-based creams which are designed to draw impurities to the surface - the new generation offers high-tech solutions to a whole host of beauty problems.

The largest trend of the year so far has seen people use multiple different masks on various parts of their faces to achieve different goals, in a craze named 'multi-masking.' Devotees have been known to use up to five masks across their face to achieve their desired look. For those suffering from blemishes on their nose but a shiny forehead and dry, dull cheeks, for example, this approach could work, offering a solution to each of the problems.

If you do want to give it a go, it is probably a safe bet to go for something purifying for any oil areas, a hydrating mask for any dry areas and one for radiance for any dull parts of your face. Put them on the relevant sections of your face and leave them on no longer than each of their recommended times.

The result could be healthy, glowing skin, although it could be an expensive habit!

SAVVY SCENTS: Sniffing essential oils can help relieve the symptoms of some illnesses.

Smell to get well

By Sally Underwood

WITH November in full swing, the build up to Christmas won't be far behind. What can be a magical and fun part of the year can also be stressful.

Ferrying children and grandchildren to parties, buying presents, all those last-minute preparations and the inevitable hangovers can all lead to feelings of stress, lethargy or even anxiety.

While there are many ways to deal with stress, an easily accessible option which may help could be aromatherapy.

The study of aromatherapy sees essential oils used in different ways to balance emotions. The oils themselves are readily accessible either in health food shops or online and can be combined with 'carrier' oils to make their scent last longer.

For anyone dealing with stress, lavender is known to have a soothing effect. This oil can help promote calmness and a sense of well-being, while ylangylang and rose oils are also said to relax the senses.

Try putting a few drops of an oil in your bath, or on your pillowcase before bed if you are struggling to unwind or sleep.

The festive season can also be tiring and if you want a healthier pick-me-up than caffeine, there are several oils which may help bring back your 'zing.'

Grapefruit, juniper berry, peppermint, lemon and bergamot oils are all uplifting and can be used with a carrier oil like avocado, jojoba or coconut oil to make a home-made body moisturiser which will offer you energising bursts of fragrance throughout the day.

Teething

SPECIALIST: Doctor Luis Perez Belmonte.

When do a baby's teeth start to grow?

A child's teeth usually start to grow within the first few months however this can vary greatly. Some babies will start to teeth when they are three to four-months-old whereas some don't start until after they turn one.

What are the symptoms of teething?

The main sign that your baby has started teething is when they want to constantly chew on something as their gums are irritated. Their gums will also be noticeably inflamed and they will drool a lot. Your child may also be irritable and in some cases also have a fever.

Are there ways to reduce the pain?

In general a baby will feel better when they have something to chew, you can purchase a teething ring which you can put in the fridge before giving it to your child which can also help soothe the pain. If it's not enough you can also use analgesics or anti-inflammatories such as paracetamol and ibuprofen.

When should you seek medical help?

Usually it is not necessary to go see a paediatrician unless the baby is extremely irritated or has a high fever as these could be signs of other problems.

“Oils are readily accessible either in health food shops or online and can be combined with 'carrier' oils.

Finally, if you have overindulged, ginger can be fantastic for settling the stomach.

Why not try making your own room diffuser using ginger oil mixed with orange and peppermint oils? The soothing smell will help calm feelings of nausea and have you onto your next party in no time!

I AM privileged to work with an amazing audiologist, Peter Ormrod, who is also a tinnitus specialist.

What is tinnitus?

Tinnitus is when you can hear a sound that doesn't have an outside source. The perception of this sound varies, some describe a high-pitched whistle, others a buzzing, or even the sound of the sea. While many of us may be temporarily affected by mild tinnitus, chronic tinnitus affects about one in 200 people.

Causes of tinnitus

Now this is where it got interesting for Peter and myself - looking at the causes of tinnitus.

While there are a number of complicated factors one of the big ones is trauma: head injuries, whiplash, falls etc. And this is where there is a huge overlap in our areas of expertise.

With specialised training and the use of correct-

Effective tinnitus treatment

By Estelle Mitchell

www.thebodyworksclic.com

ly programmed hearing aids Peter can alleviate tinnitus in 82 per cent of his sufferers.

BUT if tinnitus is caused by trauma to the head, neck and shoulders, or referred trauma through the arms and wrists... this is where I come in!

When I've spoken about chronic pain and migraines I've talked about the way every single nerve in your body runs through your neck. Including the nerve running from your ears into your brain. Bizarre, right? You'd think it would go straight in but it doesn't! It goes via the neck just like everything else.

“ Tinnitus is when you can hear a sound that doesn't have an outside source.

So, if the neck is compromised then this auditory nerve can become compromised too.

And if the nerve is compromised then what we have, in effect, is like a bad telephone line with static on it.

Tinnitus and chronic pain

New research suggests that both tinnitus and chronic pain are controlled by the same area in the brain - that part of the problem is in how the brain process these experiences and the sensory stimuli.

Tinnitus and chronic pain can occur when this system is compromised.

So, Peter and I often work together to help tinnitus sufferers - I treat their neck to help reduce the 'static' on the nerve while Peter works on the symptom to reduce the interference.

Eating your greens

WE are constantly bombarded with advice about health, receiving contradictory advice almost every week about what we should and shouldn't be eating.

While experts seem to go backwards and forwards on the health of red meat and dairy, there is at least one thing everyone seems to agree on; fruit and vegetables.

While many of us now take a daily multivitamin to supplement our diet, it is possible to consume all your vitamins with a just a few crops.

Vitamin B6 keeps your immune and nerve systems functioning properly. One banana a day is all it takes to get your recommended daily allowance.

Vitamin C can boost 'good' cholesterol levels, help protect against damaging free radicals and promote a good immune system. Just one large orange a day provides all your vitamin C needs and tastes good too!

Calcium, which helps keep our teeth and bones strong - particularly important for women after the menopause - is found in abundance in spinach and other leafy green vegetables with just one cup offering you your recommended daily allowance. For easy snacking, dried apricots are another good source of calcium, with around six offering you your RDA.

Vitamin D is an easy one living in Spain, just 15 minutes walking outside in winter will offer you your daily allowance.

Spinach wins the award for most versatile vegetable on the list, with one cup offering your RDA of folic acid, iron and magnesium. Broccoli also punches above its weight, offering you both vitamin E and magnesium, while legumes will provide you with your zinc needs, vital for a healthy immune system.

So why not drop the multivitamin this winter and grab some greens instead?

Marbella Moments

by Nicole King

A heart felt Skoal to Skol

THIS week we recorded part of our TV show from the Royal Yacht Club in the Marbella Marina. There were some fabulous photographs of Marbella back in the day on the walls of the restaurant.

One of the photographs really caught my eye; it was of the hotel Skol, towering above the nothingness that surrounded it in the early 60's.

Marbella's first apart hotel was also the biggest hotel complex the village had ever seen, offering over 300 rooms at a time when the local population was just over 12,000.

Calle Rafael Zea is the street named after the businessman, originally from Madrid, who envisioned this project and is located close to the Skol building itself. He was born in 1925 and died in 1994 and first came to Marbella himself in the mid 50's to develop real estate.

I have to admit I had no idea about the history of the building, nor was I very interested, until seeing that photo. I realise now that it's only right that I, we, do know. It's only just that we pay tribute to this man's achievements; unwittingly the Skol became the prototype for all residential tourism on the Costa del Sol and very instrumental in the tourism boom.

Designed by the architect Manuel Jaen ac-

ording to the 'Modern Movement' of the era this hotel appeared in countless Spanish movies, making it also emblematic nationally and establishing Marbella as the place to be and to be seen for the Spanish.

This building is also meaningful for many long-term expats like me and not just as a point of reference or landmark. Seeing that photograph of the Skol hotel with absolutely nothing around it but trees was quite wondrous; I remembered it like that!!!

For a few moments I could feel myself there, as a toddler with my family, meeting my grandparents at their hotel and then going to stroll around the town.

My grandparents always stayed at the Skol and loved it! (They loved cruises too). I think of them often and visit many places that bring back a smile as I walk around nowadays, but seeing that moment of history captured on camera like that was very special.

Converted into apartments in 1991, this building is still front-line beach and very much at the heart of our city; and obviously also very much part of mine. So thank you 'Rafa' and friends for the memories and cheers! A toast to you and to us all; together we are Marbella.

Note: What does Skoal mean as a toast?

Word Origin and History for skoal... also skol, Scandinavian toasting word, c.1600, from Danish skaal 'a toast,' literally 'bowl, cup,' from Old Norse skal 'bowl, drinking vessel,' originally a cup made from a shell, from Proto-Germanic *skelo, from PIE *(s)kel- (1) 'to cut' (see shell (n)).

There is no need to swelter in the heat or shiver in the cold

WITH the incredible changes in the climate, there is no doubt that weather on the Costa del Sol is getting hotter for longer and air conditioning is no longer a luxury but a must.

Airflow Air Conditioning which is now based in Benalmadena was established in 2000, spending the first six months working out of a garden shed before moving into new offices in 2001 and the fully registered company is still there with an ever growing database of clients.

Airflow not only specialise in the supply and installation of new air conditioning systems (which can supply hot air when it is cold) but also solar systems for pool heating and domestic hot water systems.

Problems with existing air conditioning and solar systems that are not working can be investigated and in most cases, repaired.

Airflow also offers maintenance contracts to ensure the smooth running of your system and also the peace of mind of having first call on the engineer's time in the case of an emergency

Even though there are many hot days and nights in the year, southern Spain also experiences some pretty chilly and damp days and nights so there is absolutely no need to put up with a cold house, cold showers or even a cold swimming pool when help is just a telephone call away.

The company is happy to travel far and wide to service client needs and covers the area from Nerja to Sotogrande as well as plenty of inland destinations and what's more, Airflow Air Conditioning is a fully legal company and is covered by public liability insurance

AIRFLOW: Also offers maintenance contracts to ensure the smooth running of your system.

There is no need to suffer from heat or cold when it is so simple to install new air conditioning units in most apartments and houses. Don't forget, if you are planning to register your property for short term lets then air conditioning in each bedroom is a must.

Raising funds for those who suffer here and abroad

Sandro and Raffaele Morelli.

ONE of the annual autumn charity dinners has been hosted by Sandro Morelli at his spectacular Villa Tiberio restaurant to raise funds for the Cudeca Hospice and the Red Cross.

Happily the weather which had been stormy and very wet in the preceding days held and guests were able to enjoy a welcome drink on the patio overlooking the many statues and pieces of architecture in the manicured gardens.

Guests, many of whom had flown specially from the UK, were treated to a three-course meal in the delightful surroundings of the restaurant where they were entertained by a number of different musical acts performing a variety of songs.

In between the music and the food, funds were raised by a team of volunteers who sold tickets for two different raffles to those who were lucky enough to be present at this sold out evening.

In addition, long time master of ceremonies, the singer Steve Cline as well as performing to great applause also conducted the much anticipated charity auction raising even more funds to be shared by the two charities.

All of the guests were impressed by the fact that former football manager Harry Redknapp flew over specially for the event, saying that he was very impressed with the hard work that his friend Sandro did to help raise funds for charity.

Also present at the evening was Sandro's brother the charming Raffaele who is the owner of Valparaiso restaurant on the road to Mijas Pueblo who will himself be hosting a charity event on December 20 with Tina Hall, who is currently taking part in La Voz on Spanish TV as one of the main attractions.

Sandro told EWN that he had reached the age when he had achieved most of his dreams and had been successful enough that he no longer needed publicity for himself or his business and what he was determined to do was to raise funds and awareness for charities that actually help people.

He said that if he could help just a few children and cancer sufferers to live better lives then he would be happy as long as others also recognised the need that will always exist and did what they could to better the lives of others as well.

TRAVELLING away from Spain this week the focus turns on Buttafuoco Storico from Italy; a serious competitor to Barolo, Barbaresco, Amarone.

Little known outside Italy, it is reasonably priced and produced in the Oltrepo' Pavese, a beautiful hilly area 70km from Milan that has cold winters and warm, dry summers. Different type of soil - bottom gravel embedded in sand, compact sandstones and also clays - in the relatively small territory impart unique characteristics to the grapes.

Through fermentation of several indigenous grapes with different characteristics, the winegrowers produce a unique wine of structure that can age for years.

The blend is 50 per cent Croatina that brings the colour and hints of red fruit; 25 per cent Barbera with its acidity the backbone of the wine, plus Ughetta Canneto and Uva Rara that enrich softness and fruit.

Buttafuoco Storico is produced by only 14 winemakers who adhere to strict rules, including being harvested by hand, aged at least 12 months in wooden barrels then a minimum six months in bottles embossed with the 'Mark of the Dawn Treader ship,' and only marketed three years after harvest.

Excellent with red meat and game dishes it also goes perfectly with blue and mature cheeses.

My favourite labels - all below €20 for a 2011 or 2013 vintage - are Vigna del Garlenzo - Az; Agricola Giorgi Franco di Giorgi Pierluigi; Vigna Montarzolo - Azienda Vinicola Calvi Davide; and Vigna Costera -

ITALIAN: Excellent with red meat.

Azienda Agricola Maggi Francesco.

These are 24 months in barrel and 10 months in bottle, so equivalent to a Spanish Gran Reserva.

Salute and happy tasting.

Council offers dog training

WHAT everybody wants is a well behaved dog and the Marbella Council is inviting owners to join a free dog training course which runs from next Monday until December 8.

Registration has to be made by Friday on the council website and there are 40 places available in this first course split into four groups of 10.

The actual training sessions will take place at Fuerte Nagüeles with instruction from a specialist in dog training Sergio Moya who said that the programme of the course focuses on the most common situations such as separation anxiety, fears and phobias, stress or conflicts related to the collection of excrement.

The hope is that this series of instructions will help to educate owners as well as their animals in order to ensure that they are aware of the nuisance that ill-behaved dogs can cause.

Taste the best fish and chips around

AT The Big Fish in La Cala de Mijas you can get a taste of home thanks to their freshly cooked and prepared fish, chips, pies and more.

The only fish and chips restaurant on the Costa del Sol to be certified by the National Federation of Fish Friers, Anna, Lesley and their staff are fully qualified in all aspects of running the restaurant, making a fun and friendly atmosphere for staff which customers can clearly see when visiting the restaurant.

Anna and Lesley had no previous experience running a fish and chips restaurant but saw a niche in the market and decided to go for it. Their first step was becoming qualified with the Federation of fish Friers in Leeds in the UK. They decided this would be the best way to ensure they managed all aspects of their business to a very high standard from the start.

The Big Fish now has customers coming following recommendations from all over the Costa del Sol and has many happy local regulars who not only enjoy their fabulous food but also their friendly service with a smile. The restaurant also welcome reviews on Facebook and TripAdvi-

PUMPKINS are a famous vegetable with a lot of virtues that are renowned for their long storage life and ease of growing.

They are traditionally grown on hills in the vegetable patch but can also be grown in large containers and grown vertically up a trellis if space is an issue.

There is a huge range of pumpkin varieties that allow you to grow just what you need. A lot of publicity is given to having the largest pumpkin but for practical reasons smaller varieties, such as butternut are more suitable to the domestic garden to have just enough for a meal rather than a week of the same pumpkin just to use it all up.

It is fun to grow some as decoration such as the miniature gourds that can be dried and keep as decoration or larger pumpkins to carve out designs highlighted by candles inside the pumpkin such as for Halloween.

The main reason for growing them however is their ability to be stored for months in the right condition to have rich thick soups and other warming recipes over the cold winter months when supplies from the garden can be limited.

To grow them you need a very compost enriched soil to retain moisture and provide nutrients as they are heavy feeders and need plenty of moisture around their roots but not on

Plentiful pumpkins - not just for Halloween

PUMPKINS:
Perfect for rich thick soup.

their leaves and vines. Wetting the plants parts above ground encourages fungal problems such as powdery mildew.

This year I had a bumper harvest from growing them in a patch that had my portable chicken coup on it the year before, with little work from my part as the chickens had done all the preparation.

You can grow them in a barrel or other large container of well composted soil mix and grow the smaller varieties up a trellis in a sunny position. If the pumpkins become very large you can put a sling around the growing pumpkin to give them support until harvest.

The way to tell if they are fully mature is when their skin turns a deeper, stronger colour. Press your fingernail against the skin to test that it is hard and tap it to see if it has a hollow sound. If the skin is soft it is not ready and if it has a hollow sound it should be ready if the skin is hard.

Harvest the pumpkin by cutting the stem, do not tear it off, with plenty of stem still attached to the pumpkin so that it will preserve longer. Unless you are using the pumpkin straight away, the close cutting of the stem to the pumpkin invites deterioration of the pumpkin in storage.

After harvest keep the pumpkins in the outdoors to harden them off in the sun for a week before storage in a cool darker place with the individual pumpkins slightly separated from each other.

The best time to plant pumpkins in the Mediterranean is in early spring after danger of frosts has passed. The earlier the better as the mid-summer can sometimes be too hot for pumpkins so an earlier harvest is recommended.

Preparing your dog for vet's inspection

THE VET'S TABLE: Do not let your dog jump off alone.

It is essential that all dogs are regularly inoculated and wormed, that is; inoculations and boosters every year, worming treatments every three months as your vet will advise. The only effective worming products are available from your vet.

Many pet owners encounter problems at the vet. The dogs and cats do not like to be examined. From an early age, make it a pleasant experience for your pet to be handled and examined by different people.

Always do this while you are present, reassure and reward the dog with praise and titbits. Only ask sensible people, who are used to dogs to assist you with this exercise.

Some if not most vets prefer to examine their patients on a table. So if you have a dog that can be lifted onto a suitable table, get the dog used to being put on the table. Hold him in a comfortable position for a few seconds, praising him and reassuring him, then give him a 'titbit' and gently lift him off.

Never let a dog jump off the table by himself. If you use a table, make sure a mat or cover is placed on it so that it is not slippery for the dog. There is no quicker way to make a dog hate being picked up and put on a table than to place it on a slippery surface.

Administering prescribed treatments:

Often following a visit to your vet

you will be required to continue a course of treatment at home. This can include: giving pills or liquid medicine (orally); applying ointments to eyes, ears, and skin; administering eye or ear drops.

The only reason dogs object to taking medicine is that they are not used to being handled. It is kinder to prepare your dog to the best of your ability for the occasion when this will probably arise. This is best done by training your dog to allow you to handle it and examine any part of its body, under any circumstances, without any resistance from your dog.

Pills can often be given by disguising the pill inside a little piece of butter, margarine or cheese. There are many "Do Not's" associated with this sort of training, all of which are common sense, but you would be surprised how many dog owners have little of this precious commodity. Do not give dogs any medicine unless specifically prescribed for that dog by a vet.

If in doubt about your dog's health, consult a vet, never take advice from unqualified people; this includes pet shops, dog breeders, dog trainers, behaviourists and the person who had a dog with the same sort of symptoms.

Do not put anything in your dog's ear. Look, don't poke! Report discharges or smells to your vet. Do not put any drops or ointment into your dog's eyes. Do not interfere with any lumps, bumps, wounds, cysts, rashes or anything else on your dog's body. Consult your vet.

Dog-less days are over

THE Furbo dog camera has finally arrived in Spain, allowing owners to check on their dogs and even give them treats while they are out of the house.

The camera, which has already been on the market in the US and the UK for several months, lets dog owners spy on their pooches by accessing the camera through an app on their phone. It also has a microphone, meaning you can communicate with your pet and even has an interactive game setting that can give your dog treats.

All you have to do is connect the device, which is about the size of a water bottle, to your Wi-Fi at home and download the app. You also have to add the treats before you leave, and then you can choose when to give them to your dog throughout the day. The app even allows you to take videos and photos and share them on social media.

If that didn't already sound impressive, the camera also has a barking detector so the owner can find out when their dog is getting restless, as well as a system of light signals which warns dogs that their owner is about to communicate.

FROM time to time pet owners contact me and ask - 'Can you help me find someone to care for all my pets? I have more than one!' Now, while I can't promise outright we will find you the perfect house-sitter, I will promise that we will do our very best to make a match for you.

We are carefully working with new house-sitters and homeowners, and asking our network to give feedback so we can be sure of our next steps. Thank you to all those who have taken the trouble to join our membership and have given feedback in our four years of trading online.

If you have used us in the past and are happy with our service please let us know, and more importantly please tell your friends and relatives. By growing our network from within our contacts we can keep our operating costs down, and continue to build a secure service.

The way we work is simple. You need to register on www.HouseSitMatch.com as a homeowner. There is a small annual charge for membership (please note the discount coupon code below we offer for Euro Weekly readers). Then you build a profile about you and your pets.

Create a house-sit advert with your dates. If you need help with the online work, choose the PREMIUM membership and we'll give you a call to help you out with your specific requirements.

Do you need a house or pet-sitter? Get in touch. House-sitting can be a win-win for both parties, free house and pet-sitting, and the experienced and checked sitters get free accommodation! Register as either house-sitter or homeowner now with a 50% off introductory offer using coupon code SPECIAL50. To find a house or pet-sitter go to www.HousesitMatch.com or call Lamia on 00 44 (0) 777 214 2742.

CHARITIES

ACE CHARITY "El Refugio" in La Cala de Mijas is a registered charity. We have on average 275 dogs in our care and we receive no help from the Town Hall or the Andalusian government. We desperately need foster homes and adoptants for our many dogs, especially the small ones and puppies who do not do well in a big shelter. We are grateful for any help offered, including donations of food and blankets. Visiting times are from 13.00 to 15.00 and you can always turn up or make an appointment by calling Denise on 669 018 736. Our website is www.ace-charity.org where you can view all the dogs in our care. (93320)

ADANA THE ANIMAL SHELTER IN ESTEPONA. We always need volunteers to walk and socialise with our dogs and help with cleaning. We also need good homes for our animals that you can see on www.adana.es. Kennels open every day 10-1.30, Camino de Casares, near Parque de los Pedregales, Estepona. (5 minutes from the Poligono) For more information call 952 113 467, available from 10.00am until 14.00pm. (93319)

SEPE the horse and donkey charity is open to the public week-ends from 10.00 to 5.00. Volunteers are much needed in all departments and are welcome at anytime. For our riding for the disabled classes, we are also in need of extra helpers. We are nationally registered by the Spanish Ministry of the Interior (164640) but only with your support can we give the equine a voice. If you can just commit to 2 or 3 euros a month it will really help make a difference. You can find us at Lauro Golf Equestrian Centre, Alqueria, Alhaurin de la Torre. Tel. 608 258 950 info@sepeonline.net www.sepeonline.net (93321)

AT SOS ANIMAL REFUGE we have dogs, young and old looking for homes. Some of our dogs have been with us for some time and would love to find a cosy spot to curl up in and a knee on which to rest their heads. If you have room in your heart and home we would love to hear from you. We do not put our dogs to sleep - no matter how old, they are safe with us. For day to day needs and to pay for veterinary care, we much appreciate the support we receive. We desperately need items to sell on our market stall to help raise funds and are happy to come and collect. So if you are having a clear-out, please contact us on 605 227 155. If you would like to know more about re-homing, please call 653 257 875. Visit our website www.sos-animals.org or please phone

Sandy on 952 385 923 or 666 814 056 if you would like to make a donation or help in any way. (93317)

Vanquish bows out

THE very last of the Aston Martin Vanquish S range has been released. The S Ultimate is the British firm's glamorous send off to the now iconic model.

Aimed at serious collectors, there are just 175 Ultimates up for grabs, with a starting price of £211,995 (€237,706).

There's little to improve on the monstrous 595bhp already offered by the regular Vanquish S. So this rare collectable instead focuses on style, with three new designer themes to choose from.

Ultimate black, a blueish grey, and white gold are the colour schemes, while buyers can be as picky as they like about the interior design.

All Ultimates feature carbon fibre brakes, treadplates, and grilles and are emblazoned with a rose gold 'Ultimate' badge.

Performance braking

by Matthew Elliott

FORD has a new solution for drivers who miss the old-fashioned hydraulic handbrake. Its Drift Stick goes against the modern obsession with the electronic handbrake.

The Drift Stick is a lever connected to the electronic handbrake in the new Ford RS Edition. Skilled drivers can use it to lock the rear wheels and slide, rally car like, while conducting a sharp turn.

The patented device slips easily into the car's diagnostics port. It was developed with the help of rally driver Ken Block, who showcases the Drift Stick in a YouTube video for Ford.

It works in unison with the anti-lock system and is far easier to use than traditional hydraulic handbrakes.

That doesn't mean new drivers will suddenly be performing rally stunts on public streets.

Drivers will have to know how to drift before they can make any real use of the new technology. Not to mention the fact that drifting is illegal on almost all public roads.

Electric shock!

SLOW UPTAKE: A BMW i3 in Barcelona.

SPAIN does not place in the top 10 of a Europe-wide ranking of countries selling the most electric cars and hybrids.

New data from the Association of European Automobile Manufacturers (ACEA) has revealed the plug-in sector has just 0.3 per cent penetration in Spain, placing the country 14th on the European chart.

Norway tops the ranking with a 29 per cent market share, followed by the Netherlands with 6 per cent and Sweden with 3.6 per cent. The UK places sixth with 1.4 per cent with Ireland in 12th with 0.5 per cent.

The ACEA report says that there is a clear pattern between per capita income and interest in electric vehicles, with richer countries in the lead.

For example, the average income per capita in Norway is €64,000 while in Spain it is €24,000.

ROAD TEST by Nick Fletcher

Skoda Kodiaq Edition

THE Kodiaq is Skoda's largest SUV, available with five or seven seats and with a variety of engine and trim options, giving it very broad appeal. Also offering the choice of 2WD or 4WD, the Kodiaq starts at €25,259 (£22,190) for the entry level S model but most buyers will move to at least mid-range specification to get the best blend of equipment.

My test model was an Edition version with a 2.0 litre 148 hp diesel engine and in 4WD form. Standard kit includes alloy wheels, cruise control, drive-mode selection, roof rails, blind-spot detection, dual zone aircon, keyless entry and stop-start, rear parking sensors, sat-nav with 23cm touchscreen, connectivity, wireless phone charging and even umbrellas which slot into the front doors! This version costs €38,332 (£33,675).

The 2.0 litre diesel unit is smooth and quiet, with a 0-100 kph time of 9.2 seconds and a top speed of 195 kph (121 mph). Fuel consumption is 18.2 kpl (51.4 mpg).

The Kodiaq looks quite imposing and is larger in the metal than it appears in photographs. The frontal look with its narrow headlights and larger grille takes inspiration from its flagship stablemate the Skoda Superb.

Underway the Kodiaq proves surprising nimble and impressively secure and controlled on the corners, with light precise steering giving good feedback. Ride quality is also excellent. In overall driving terms I'd say it was best in the class.

Inside, the dashboard is rather restrained in design but is very functional and the materials look robust and hard-wearing. The cabin is very roomy, with lots of head and legroom, and while the third row seats are a little cramped, the middle row does slide forward to create more legroom if needed. With this sort of versatility, a flat-load floor and plenty of oddment stowage space including two gloveboxes, the Kodiaq earns top score for practicality. Even with all seven seats in use, there is 270 litres of bootspace and folding the seats boosts it to a cavernous 2,065 litres.

Rivals in the sector include Nissan X-Trail, Hyundai Santa Fe, Kia Sorento and perhaps the Ford Edge - all formidable contenders - but the Kodiaq newcomer covers all bases - well-built, spacious, comfortable, and with refined driving dynamics.

ITV test overhauled

UPDATED: ITV test.

THE Spanish government has announced a series of changes to the ITV test for private vehicles in 2018.

Coming into force on May 20, an official statement said that the MOT equivalent will be "more demanding" in order to detect cases of manipulation regarding emissions in particular.

All centres will thus be equipped with new diagnostic reading devices which will connect to vehicles' onboard computers to analyse security systems and detect 'malicious software' or 'cheating.'

ITV inspectors must also hold a 'Superior Automotive Technician' qualification as a minimum.

In addition, if a vehicle passed its technical inspection in any other European Union country it will remain valid in Spain until the next scheduled review.

Drivers may also book their test up to one month in advance of the suggested date.

Finally, if a vehicle fails the ITV test motorists will be able to choose a different centre for the second test rather than being forced to use the same one.

ENGLAND host Germany on November 10 and Brazil on November 14 in international friendlies at Wembley ahead of the 2018 World Cup Finals with manager Gareth Southgate throwing down the Gauntlet.

"I don't think anybody can sit back and safely think they're going to be involved next summer," warned Southgate.

"In every position there's really strong competition," said Southgate, who has brought in Joe Gomez, Tammy Abraham and Ruben Loftus Cheek.

Southgate has left out Alex Oxlade Chamberlain, Daniel Sturridge, Jermain Defoe, Chris Smalling, Jake Livermore, Fraser Forster and Aaron Cresswell.

Reining World champions Germany, world cup winners four times, and five-time World Cup winners Brazil are arguably England's toughest duo they could face as an indicator to their 2018 World Cup hopes.

It will be a real test of steel and nerves against Joachim Low's Germany - cruising to qualification from Group C - with nine wins out of nine.

Brazil are likely to field their strongest side, including stars Philippe Coutinho, Neymar and Gabriel Jesus, as they prepare for Russia, in a bid to clinch their sixth World Cup success.

Southgate will finalise the England squad - after friendlies against Germany and Brazil and games against Holland in Amsterdam on March 23, and against Italy at Wembley on March 27.

"If I had to pick a squad tomorrow I know who I'd take. Over the next six months that could evolve drastically," said Southgate.

Phil Jones, John Stones and Gary Cahill are key defensive players and Southgate believes England have in their locker.

"Not just this season, but there was a long period in the middle of last season where Phil Jones has been the best defender," Southgate said of the Manchester United star.

"Phil has had great experiences - with both club and country - he organises and competes well and it's clear what he brings to the team," said Southgate.

pool), Joe Hart (West Ham, loan from Manchester City), Jordan Henderson (Liverpool).

Phil Jones (Manchester United), Harry Kane (Spurs), Jesse Lingard (Manchester United), Ruben Loftus-Cheek (Crystal Palace, loan from Chelsea), Harry Maguire (Leicester City), Jordan Pickford (Everton), Marcus Rashford (Manchester United).

Danny Rose (Spurs), Raheem Sterling (Manchester City), John Stones (Manchester City), Kieran Trippier (Spurs), Jamie Vardy (Leicester City), Kyle Walker (Manchester City), Harry Winks (Spurs), Ashley Young (Manchester United).

F1: Lewis hams it up

LEWIS HAMILTON heads to Brazil on November 12 having won his fourth Formula 1 World Championship in Mexico last month.

"This year was a massive challenge I was looking forward to," said Hamilton, ahead of the penultimate race at the Autódromo José Carlos Pace, São Paulo, Brazil

Mercedes driver Hamilton, who has won three titles in four years, joins Sebastian Vettel, Alain Prost, Juan Manuel Fangio and Michael Schumacher as the only drivers to have won at least four F1 titles.

Ghosts and ghouls at Miraflores

HALLOWEEN saw many strange figures and apparitions at Miraflores with prizes on offer for the best turned out and a day of fun bowling with a cauldron of stew for lunch between the bowling sessions!

A great time was had by all with some fantastic outfits on display. The dressing up prize was won by John Barnes (what a surprise, he makes Danny La Rue's wardrobe look bare!) and just for the record the bowling prizes were won by Tom Cordner and Sheila McGurk.

The largest open bowls competition on the coast the Miraflores Open begins on Saturday at 10am with the Open Fours, the Mixed Triples start Sunday and the Mixed Pairs on Monday.

A record entry has been received which means a full day's bowling every day of the competition, which is great news especially for spectators.

The event will have two major sponsors, namely IbeX Insurance and Currencies Direct, both of whom will have representatives on site to answer questions about their companies to both players and spectators.

Spectators are welcome at all times, with a fully stocked bar with food available to satisfy everybody's needs.

SPAIN Captain Sergio Ramos will get a taster of the 2018 World Cup Finals when they play hosts Russia in an international friendly game on November 14.

"We have never lost focus and been united on one aim to reach the World Cup. It will be my fourth World Cup and that fills me with pride," said Ramos.

Spain meet Russia in a friendly in St Petersburg at the 70,000 capacity Kretovsky Stadium - dubbed the 'UFO' - to play on a pitch that has been relaid THREE times!

A third new pitch was laid in June, three weeks before the start of the Confederation Cup. Zenit FC played two league games on the second pitch laid, and chunks of turf were ragged up!

"Russia doesn't have experience with sliding pitches in football stadiums and that's a real challenge," said St Petersburg's Deputy Governor Igor Albin.

The Kretovsky Stadium is one of 12 stadiums across 11 Russian cities that will host matches, including the 2018 World Cup semi-final and the third-place play-off games.

The Kretovsky Stadium has been praised as one of the world's most advanced stadiums which took over a decade to build, reportedly costing more than 49 billion rubles (€950 million), seven times the amount announced in 2004 when original plans were drawn up.

Deputy Governor Albin said: "This multifunction sport and cultural complex is exploited all year round so we have a retractable roof and a sliding pitch. It's a reasonable price."

SERGIO RAMOS: World Cup winner.

Ramos proud as Spain head to Russia

Before Spain head to Russia they host Costa Rica in Malaga on November 11, the first of a double-header friendly fixtures awaiting coach Julen Lopetegui's squad.

Spain defeated Israel 1-0 last month, to finish five points ahead of Italy in the World Cup qualifying Group G.

Spain qualified for the 2018 World Cup, beating Albania 3-0 in Alicante, in the wake of the disputed referendum in Cataluña, that led to Barcelona defender Gerard Pique being booed.

"Many things have happened but we have focused on the best interests of the team," said Lopetegui, who has won eight out of nine competitive games since replacing Vicente del Bosque in 2016.

On qualifying for the 2018 World Cup in Russia, Lopetegui said: "We are delighted and proud of our achievements, it's important for Spain.

"We've qualified for the World Cup, which was our primary objective," said Lopetegui.

Pique and national teammate Sergio Ramos put aside political differences to reach next summer's World Cup after Pique had been vocal in his support for Cataluña's referendum.

Pique said he could quit, but a pact was made: "I have a very good relationship with Gerard - even though we think differently - we have no problem between us," said Ramos.

Márquez's fourth MotoGP title bid

SPAIN'S defending MotoGP World Champion Marc Márquez heads to Valencia on November 12 - needing only an 11th place finish - to win a fourth MotoGP title.

The 2017 MotoGP World Championship final race in Valencia sees Respol Honda Team's Márquez enter the last round of the season ahead of Ducati Team's Andrea Dovizioso.

Standings after race 17 of 18 see Márquez 21 points ahead of Dovizioso, after the Italian won the Malaysian MotoGP on October 29.

Márquez, who needs to score five points - if Dovizioso wins - an 11th place or better finish, was pointless in three races during the 2017 MotoGP World Championship, when crashing out in both Argentina and France.

Kit controversy

ADIDAS have caused controversy among Spanish social media users after many claimed the new Spanish National shirt contains features resembling the flag of the Second Spanish Republic.

The shirt, released by Adidas online on Monday, will be used by the National side at next year's World Cup in Russia, and reportedly pays homage to the shirt worn by the Spanish side during the 1994 USA World Cup.

The dominant colour of the shirt remains the usual red, while a new multi-coloured stripe appears down the side; a feature many claim bears resemblance to the flag of the Second Spanish Republic.

One Twitter user reportedly said: "Boycott the republican national team shirt. Spain is a monarchy, not a republic," while another asked, "I guess the Spanish Republic is back?"

Adidas claim that the stripe is blue, not purple like that of the flag, and according to the RFEF's official website, the kit "sums up the courage and the red fury. It presents a different and dynamic graphic design consisting of red, yellow and blue diamonds, which represent the speed, energy and style of football that is associated with the Spanish national team."

The Second Spanish Republic was proclaimed in 1931 and lasted until the outbreak of the Civil War in 1936, with many in modern Spain associating the 'tricolour' flag of the Republic with the political left.

STUNNING: Cucciniello produced an emphatic first round win on his EFC debut.

Fuengirola fighter calls out EFC Champ

The Englishman made a stunning debut last month

By Benjamin Park

AFTER a successful Extreme Fighting Championship (EFC) debut, Fuengirola based MMA fighter Jay Cucciniello has called out Featherweight Champion Igeu Kabesa.

Cucciniello, who calls himself the 'Mellow Fellow,' introduced himself to the EFC featherweight division with a stunning first round submission victory over Wesley Hawkey in the EFC 64 main event in Durban last month.

The experienced Hawkey initially seemed to have the upper hand in the fight, catching Cucciniello with a barrage of punches.

But the Englishman turned the fight on its head as he forced the South African to the fence and managed to get the takedown, before finishing his opponent with a rear-naked choke.

After the victory, the 30-year-old spoke exclusively to Euro Weekly News, saying: "This was my greatest achievement so far in my MMA journey.

"I knew going into the fight that I would leave with my hand being raised. The experience was unreal."

Now, prior to the EFC 65 Carnival City event, Cucciniello has sent a message on Social Media aimed at both EFC VP of Talent Graeme Cartmell and Kabesa, claiming that he wants to fight the South African.

Cucciniello said: "You know the fight to make; it's what the fans have been asking for. I've been getting tweets and messages when I'm going to be fighting him.

"2018. Cape Town, sounds like a good spot... Make the fight happen, get it done."

Featherweight Champion Kabesa later responded to the Mellow Fellow's message, simply saying: "Make it happen."
