A HOMELESS man allegedly paid €100 by a British stag party to have the groom's name and address tattooed on his forehead has called for them to be jailed.

Polish-born Tomek Matuszewski, 34, says he has reported the offenders to the police after returning to Benidorm from Granada in Andalucia, where he spent a few days with friends.

And he marched to the Foreign Tourists' Office to file a complaint about the incident before being taken for a medical check-up.

He said being handed the money while drunk was "like winning the lottery," but was horrified when he woke up the next day.

"My reaction was: 'what the f*** have I done?'" he added.

The inking was supposed to read 'Jamie Blake, North Shields NE28,' but only the first two letters of the post code were completed because Tomek was in too much pain, and now he wants those responsible to face justice.

Speaking to UK media, he

said: "I'd like to see the culprit go to jail as well as the tattooist. I want justice and I hope karma will come back to them."

Mr Blake, 36, earlier denied his involvement in the stunt having recently moved to Benidorm and deciding to go ahead with his stag party despite separating from his fiancée.

He told the Newcastle Evening Chronicle: "I was not there at the time. There was a big group of around 30 of us drinking in the bar.

"There was a group of Irish lads there as well and Tomek. He isn't homeless, he lives with my friend and works on the strip.

"I got drunk and was asked to leave the bar. I was never in the tattoo parlour and as far as I know he was not paid money."

The incident has sparked outrage among expatriates in the holiday hotspot, and Karen Maling Cowles, president of the Benidorm British Business Association, has been leading a fundraising campaign to get the tattoo removed.

She said: "Tomek has contacted us. He was emotional and overwhelmed by the publicity given by the media and acts of kindness by the public.

"We are looking for help with various things for Tomek including somewhere not expensive for him to stay while we get things organised with doctors and so on."

Maureen Daniels added: "Well done for standing up to help this poor man. He has gone from an encounter with the worst of British in Benidorm to the very best. I hope his problems will soon be on the way to being solved."

Holidaymaker Paul, a 35-year-old lorry driver, told The Sun: "Today I've seen in the papers that Jamie has said it was nothing to do with him and Tommy wasn't homeless. That's a joke - it was his idea."

Police have confirmed they are probing the incident.

Valencia official popular place

OVERNIGHT stays in Valencia and its province have risen during the first six months of the year, while figures have dropped in Benidorm and Costa Blanca. The Hotel Business Association claims Alicante represents 40 per cent of the market, Valencia 27 per cent, Castellon represents 12 per cent.

Clear waters

DENIA'S beach of Molinell has been considered fit for bathing despite neighbouring Oliva banning swimming in the nearby river. The Ministry of Environment said the quality of the sea water in the part of Les Dovesas which borders the riverbed is good. But Oliva is preventing bathing in the Molinell river after detecting bacteria.

Highway poor

AN inquiry into the 'poor state' of the road network in Valencia has been called for by one of the main government opposition parties Cuidados. Party member Toni Canto said that the roads in the area have the largest underspend of any region in Spain, a fact he said should be rectified.

Life saving tips

A FREE first aid workshop for cyclists is to be held tomorrow (Friday) at the Alfaz Pensioners' Home. Organised by the city council, the course will be run by the Red Cross from 7pm, and is aimed at riders who are more vulnerable to injury higher risk of injury if involved in a road accident.

All out at sea

A BOAT with seven crew spotted 70km from the coast in high waters was towed to the safety of Benidorm port by a Maritime Rescue Vessel. The skipper said the stray boat was spotted by a fisherman who raised the alarm, adding that the men were in 'good condition.'

It's ride on time

A NEW bike park is to be created next to the Tossal de Captivador in La Nucia. In a bid to improve the area's mountain bike routes network, forestry and gardening students from the Pinar de Garaita ninth Employment Workshop are building the new park due to open in October.

HEAVENLY VIEW: The incredible shot was captured in Italy's Dolomite mountains.

Shooting stars

THE view is out of this world.

This stunning shot shows the Milky Way emerging over the three peaks of the Tre Cime di Lavaredo in Italy's Dolomite mountain range.

And it landed Spanish snapper Carlos F Turienzo on the shortlist for the 2018 Insight Astronomy Photographer of the Year contest.

Organised by the Royal Observatory Greenwich in association with BBC Sky at Night Magazine, the competition this year received more than 4,200 entries from 91 countries.

And after making the final cut, the Galician photographer said: "We had been travelling for 24 hours without sleeping to reach our destination before the one night where clear skies were forecasted ended.

"After reaching the hut and having a nice dinner, we climbed up to the cliff and waited for night-time to come.

"Unfortunately it came with a cloudy sky. We stood there being optimistic, knowing that all our efforts would be rewarded, and eventually the clouds disappeared and the magic happened: a beautiful Milky Way emerged over the mountains! "It was amazing being there together enjoying the magnificent spectacle, truly a dream come true."

Terror attack fears

PASSENGERS on a train in Valencia City centre feared a terrorist attack when a group of robed men with a megaphone declared the carriage was full of sinners who were going to die and burn in hell.

The nine German men are said to part of an evangelical group, and also carried a large cross and pamphlets during the frightening rant.

They have since been arrested on charges of public disorder and bail has been set at €12,000.

A statement from the police and the Metrovalencia control service confirmed 'the volume and content of the proclamations generated panic reactions among some passengers, who thought it was a terrorist attack.'

After two stops passengers were seen pushing their way out of the carriage and running away via the internal video circuit.

Shortly afterwards, the driver stopped the convoy and the men were arrested.

Conman caught out

A FUGITIVE walked into a Benidorm police station to fill out paperwork and now faces up to 15 years in prison for fraud in his home country.

The Moldovan man was wanted by Interpol, and while completing documents in the station, officers discovered there was an order for international detention against him.

A National Police spokesman said the detainee conned €540,000 out of nine Cypriots as part of an organised real estate scam, offering land at low prices and pocketing the cash.

Once he had made a considerable amount of money, he fled to Spain, where he has been in hiding.

The defendant faces a penalty in his country that can be up to 15 years in prison according to the Moldovan Penal Code.

He has been handed over to the Central Court of Instruction acting as a guard of the National Court to be extradited.

IN THE POST: Orwell is thought to have caught tuberculosis after being shot by a sniper in the Spanish Civil War.

By George

PIONEERING research has suggested British author George Orwell was killed by tuberculosis he caught in a Spanish hospital.

The Nineteen Eighty-Four penman died from a haemorrhage in January 1950.

And while the cause of his death is well known, it has remained unclear where he contracted the condition. But scientific tests on a letter the author sent to Sergey Dinamov, editor of the Soviet journal Foreign Literature, appear to have solved the mystery.

It was written in July 1937, shortly after Orwell returned to Britain after fighting against the military uprising of General Francisco Franco. The analysis was carried out by Israeli researcher Gleb Zilberstein, who in an earlier study verified traces of kidney disease on the manuscript of Russian writer Mikhail Bulgakov's The Master and Margarita.

He used acetate film to extract bacteria and morphine from the document, which were checked against archived medical registration records for those that fought in the Spanish Civil War, which broke out in 1936 and ended in 1939. Zilberstein told The Times: "The level of infection was very high and the [hygiene standards of] hospitals were very poor."

"The civil war in Spain was the last war in the 20th century without penicillin.

"Most wounded people got infections in hospital in Spain and mortality was higher from infections."

"Orwell got TB at a period of the civil war when there was a higher probability of hospital infections."

Orwell went to Spain to write about and fight in the war, during which Franco's fascist regime battled the Republican government for control of the country, eventually becoming a lieutenant in the militia of the communist, anti-Stalinist Workers' Party of Marxist Unification. He was shot in May 1937 through the neck by a sniper while moving through trenches at the Aragon Front, with the injury permanently affecting his voice.

Zilberstein says there is a "very high probability" the author was infected while recovering in hospital, although contaminated food could also have been to blame.

The traces of morphine are believed to have come from painkillers administered to him at the time.

Orwell later moved to the Scottish island of Jura, where he completed Nineteen Eighty-Four as his tuberculosis worsened.

The book was published in June 1949 and the novelist - real name Eric Blair - died six months later, aged 46.

Faeces shut beaches

THREE Costa Blanca beaches were shut to bathers at the height of the holiday season after raw sewage was found to be contaminating the water.

The red flag was flying from lifeguard masts, not to warn swimmers of stormy waters or strong currents, but because of the health hazard posed by faecal matter bobbing in the sea.

The cause of the contamination at Moraira's popular Portet beach is not known. Routine hygiene tests had shown up the problem and led to the red flag being flown to ban swimming.

It remained flying until further tests could confirm the contamination had cleared.

At Pego's Molinell beach bathing was banned in the river that runs into the sea at that point. High levels of bacteria were found, indicating sewage was contaminating the water.

However, council officials still allowed swimming in the sea, saying the problem appeared to be confined to the fresh water.

Heading up the coast to Valencia, heavy rain was the culprit at Pinedo beach where swimming had also been banned.

A sudden downpour overwhelmed the town's waterworks, causing raw sewage to be flushed through the rainwater pipes and out to sea.

This is because Valencia uses the same pipes for both raw sewage and rainwater, so a sudden increase in flow can be more than the waterworks can deal with, leading to faecal matter being washed directly to the sea.

CLOSED: Sewage caused bathing to be banned at Moraira.

Suspended holiday

A TOURIST spent the first week of his holiday battling to get his upturned, suspended car removed from a rubber tree in Altea.

Irishman Ciaran Wolbeek, 45, miraculously escaped with minor injuries after an accident which left his vehicle in the precarious and life-endangering position.

He said: "If I hadn't ducked down I would have been decapitated by an ornamental railing or a piece of brickwork."

Following a long drive from Madrid, Mr

Wolbeek was attempting a 'complicated manoeuvre' on arrival at his rented house in Carrer Sol, when he misjudged a steep slope on a side road and accidentally drove through a plastered wall.

Five days later - after dozens of calls to and from his insurance company and the police, together with a bill for €260 - the suspended car was removed from the tree in front of a crowd of curious residents and tourists.

Dad for it

HIS rock star father is famous for his wild behaviour. And Gene Gallagher, 17, appears ready to follow in dad Liam's footsteps after big sister Molly Moorish, 21, posted a snap of him smoking two cigarettes at once in Ibiza.

LITTLE LIAM: Gene Gallagher.

The former Oasis front-man was on holiday with his three children, all from different mothers, who also include 18-year-old Lennon.

FORMER CHAMP: Ullrich during his pro cycling days.

He said that Ullrich "had almost become a family member but when his wife left him he started taking amphetamines: he would only sleep for two hours. He'd start drinking beer at 6am and went on like that until the evening. He also told me that he had a prescription for cocaine."

Ull shook up

HE won an Olympic gold medal and the Tour de France during his time as an athlete.

But former cycling star Jan Ullrich says separation from his wife AND children has "thrown me into the deepest despair" after being arrested in Mallorca.

The German, 44, was held for nearly 24 hours after allegedly breaking into the home of neighbour and actor Til Schweiger - known for roles in Inglourious Basterds and Atomic Blonde - and threatening him. It reportedly ended in a brawl between the pair, and Schweiger told German media they had previously been friends but the relationship has recently deteriorated.

Royal rebel!

SHE'S 38th in line to the British throne.

But Lady Amelia Windsor threw royal protocol to the wind after she went topless on a Spanish beach. The Duke of Kent's granddaughter, 22, was snapped wearing only a pair of pink bikini bottoms as she strolled on the beach in Santa Eulalia, Ibiza, before topping up her tan on a sun lounger.

The model is holidaying on the White Isle with sister Marina, 25.

Elle of a look

SHE earned her nickname 'The Body' after appearing on the cover of Time.

And Australian model Elle Macpherson showed she can still turn heads as she donned a sequin gown for an event in Mallorca.

The 54-year-old is rumoured to be dating British doctor Andrew Wakefield, 61, who was eight years ago struck off the UK medical register for unethical behaviour, misconduct and fraud.

Foxy Roxy

SHE suffered a horror crash while driving a Formula 2 stock car last month. But former Emmerdale star Roxanne Pallett, 35, appeared to be making a strong recovery during a sunshine break in Spain. The Celebrity Stars In Their Eyes winner sent temperatures soaring after slipping into a skimpy yellow bikini before hitting the pool.

Water woes

DRYING UP: Residents say the cuts have caused 'chaos.'

by Tara Rippin

RESIDENTS and holiday-makers in parts of Altea have been banned from drinking or preparing food with household water.

An official order has been released by the town mayor's office 'forbidding the consumption' of domestic water until further notice, amid fears of high levels of chlorine.

The affected zone includes a large residential area in Altea Hills and the sea front areas of Masacrat, where users are also suffering nightly water cuts due to a shortage.

According to members of the Sierra Altea Neighbours' Association, water in that particular area is supplied by Aprobera, unlike the rest of the town.

The group's web coordinator Terrance Miles, said: "The water drought is causing chaos and serious problems in the urbanisation surrounding Altea.

"The water is reported to be at minimum levels for supply to the Sierra and is being turned off at night between midnight and 8am.

"This is causing even further problems for the lower part of the Sierra as it is creating air locks in the main water pipe, thus stopping any water reaching those customers."

The Directorate General of Public Health officially deemed the water 'unfit for human consumption,' and residents are urged to adhere to the ban until further tests are carried out and an official statement made.

It is unknown how long the water cuts will continue for.

Double drowning woe

TWO people drowned within minutes of each other in two separate incidents on the Costa Blanca.

The first casualty, a 75-year-old woman, died while swimming in the sea at Muntanyar beach in Javea.

Emergency services arrived at the scene but could not revive her.

Minutes later, a 60-year-old got into trouble and drowned in the Jose Trenzano municipal pool in Alcoy. Again, emergency services were unable to assist and could only confirm the death.

As of July 31 this year, there have been 184 cases of people drowning in public aquatic spaces in Spain.

Figures show that 58 people lost their lives in public swimming areas in July alone.

A spokesperson pointed out that although this is an alarming figure, the number is significantly lower than the 95 drownings recorded during the same month last year.

In 2017, 544 people drowned in Spain, almost half of those killed in traffic accidents last year.

Fraudster foiled

AN internet scam which swindled victims across Spain out of €35,000 has been thwarted following the arrest of a man in Benidorm.

The 39-year-old is the alleged creator of several profiles on different internet platforms for buying and selling products.

He was found to be charging purchasers without ever delivering the goods, and has been accused of a continued crime of fraud.

A National Police statement confirmed officers are investigating six crimes in Madrid, Pamplona, Santiago de Compostela and Bilbao, committed over a six-month period - although more people are believed to have fallen prey to the trickster's antics.

A team of officers dedicated to technical crime from the Brigade of Judicial Police of the Commissariat of Benidorm began following the alleged fraudster's trail, after a victim brought the hoax to light, and they discovered he had opened five different bank accounts to try to hide his identity.

The statement reads: "The prisoner had made the scam his only way of life. The alleged fraudster advertised all kinds of objects, particularly electronic material, at a price below its market value to quickly capture his victims."

Once the buyer was interested in the article for sale, they were given instructions about the bank account or application which he had to use to make the payment.

The spokesperson added: "But instead of giving the buyer the object purchased as agreed, he appropriated the money."

SKETCH: How the 62-year-old might look today.

DATED: Old photograph of suspected child rapist Neil Jackson.

A PREDICTIVE drawing of a suspected child rapist thought to be living in Alicante Province has been released by British police.

Officers in Derbyshire want to question Neil Jackson in connection with the indecent assault and rape of a young girl.

The only photograph available for a BBC Crimewatch 'most wanted' appeal was taken a number of years ago, so an artists' impression was created in the hope it will better resemble the now 62-year-old Jackson.

He has a number of tattoos on his left arm and back, including his own name, and while he has many connections to Spain, Derbyshire Constabulary suspect Jackson may be in Alicante.

Anybody with information is asked to call Crimestoppers on the Spanish overseas number 900 555 111.

€1m house for free

SQUATTERS have moved into six empty homes that were once valued at €1 million each, just days after security surveillance on the houses was stopped.

Up until recently the houses, which have been empty for eight years, have had regular security patrols. But squatters were quick to move in to the luxury houses which, although nearly finished, have never been put up for sale.

In total 11 houses were built but never sold due to the financial crisis which hit Spain. They sit on an enormous plot in Via Parque, Alicante, where hundreds of homes were due to be built.

The original developers went bust before the sale of the villas, and since then any enquiries about the sale of the homes has been answered with the reply that the present owners want to sell them to a developer as a job lot.

OUR VIEW

Heatwave or climate change?

THERE seems to be almost inevitability at the way in which the temperature across Europe is increasing so dramatically.

There have been heatwaves in the past, the most memorable perhaps in the UK the summer of 1976 but that was something of a freak, although 1977 also had hot periods.

This however is different as the temperatures are rising to unprecedented levels and although there is a forecast by the University of Alicante that this latest bout of hot weather has officially finished, they also believe that it will return again in September with a vengeance.

The mainstream media doesn't seem to find this particularly bothersome, although it does allow for some useful 'scorchio' headlines, but the reality seems to be that climate change is becoming more likely than ever to be the reason for this increased heat.

Many of us moved to Spain in order to enjoy the warm weather but when it becomes so hot, both day and night, that it is difficult to breathe let alone take walks; we have to sit up and take note!

For older people, the heat can be dangerous and there is also the likelihood of increased outbreaks of wildfire due to the parched undergrowth, although it appears there haven't been as many disastrous outbreaks as last year (although there is still time).

At the end of the day, please be careful during the very hot weather, keep hydrated, use sun block and if you have animals make sure that they aren't exposed to danger.

MARIA, 32, on holiday from Malaga

"Yes, I think so. There are so many cars and most of them are polluting the environment as much as ever.

"We have to do more, even with recycling, etc. The seasons are changing and it's quite strange to see. This summer only started at the end of June, and there was a lot of rain before that.

"But the heatwaves everywhere must also be a result of climate change.

"I work in Barcelona and it reached 40 degrees recently. There is a lot of smog there too, it's sometimes difficult to breathe. But the authorities in Barcelona are trying to make changes to respond to this. There are parts of the city that don't allow cars through that are over 10 years old!"

Mrs Smith, 58, lives in Spain but originally from Hertfordshire

"Not really no. If you go back in history, there has been catastrophic climate change. Some of the highest temperatures ever were from times when mankind could not be blamed. I'm not saying we're helping, but it's not all down to humans.

"There's not a huge amount of evidence, I'm more worried about plastics in the sea and the abuse of wildlife. Those are more important environmental issues for me."

David and Glynis Plume, 61 and 65, on holiday from Manchester

"Yes. Everywhere is getting warmer, although the UK still gets bad winters! The reasons are all around: pollution, cars, factories. These factors are ingrained in society and so it's not easy to change things. It will take a long time but small things can be done along the way to help.

"The developing countries are trying to catch up though and they are not willing to make the same sacrifices that developed countries are. But then we've had our industrial revolution so maybe they have a right to have theirs!"

Chris, 35, lives in Spain but originally from Essex

"Yes. Recycling is so important too. It's vital for everyone to be aware of the environment and to play their part. It's hard to see any easy solutions. I think a lot of climate change is down to transportation. Even with all the electric cars, they might reduce emissions, but they have a negative side because of all the acids that are in-involved in battery production. The factories that are used to manufacture the cars emit more toxic waste than normal cars.

"We're never going to completely solve it, because of the lack of alternative solutions. Solar panels are too expensive and are not enough on their own."

Anonymous, 30-ish, on holiday from Manchester

"Yes, the evidence shows that global warming has been real over the past few decades.

"The sea levels are rising, etc. We have to reduce plastics and use our own containers from home more. There was a campaign for a 'plastic free July' which was a good idea. People could also buy more second-hand clothes and use public transport more. Another problem is that trains are often more expensive than planes!"

Dog walk sex attack

A WOMAN, aged 63, out walking her dog, was subjected to a sexual assault which only stopped when a passer-by spotted the incident and the attacker fled.

The woman was exercising her pet in Benidorm's Rincon de Loix area when she was grabbed round the mouth and neck from behind in a terrifying ordeal at 7.45pm on Monday.

The victim was alone at the time in an isolated area with no help at hand, but by chance another woman happened on the scene.

On realising there was now a witness, the attacker ran off. Thanks to a description given to police by the witness a 34-year-old Indian man was later arrested on suspicion of being the attacker.

The victim was taken to hospital in Villajoyosa for an examination and was later discharged.

Lifeline for local wildlife

TEN THOUSAND litres of water are being poured into the Azud Dam at Ondura in the north of Alicante to minimise the death of various wildlife due to drought.

According to the city council, this is the third tanker load of water to be added this summer.

Councillor Pedro Picornell said: "The aim is to maintain the ecological flow of this wet area and prevent the drought from affecting the ecosystem, mainly the fish and birds which have the dam as habitat.

"It is an emergency action, as long as irrigation water is not available to be able to introduce it into the Azud. This summer it has already been necessary to make two other water contributions in July, which the irrigators made."

He added, "Although water additions were not necessary last year, in the summer of 2016 five spills of irrigation water were made."

While there is a shortage of water, the most recent emergency operation was carried out using a cistern hired by the city council.

Councillor Picornell added that further contributions will be made if necessary in order to sustain the environment for local wildlife.

Child porn gang busted

POLICE have seized 2.4 million images and broken up a network which distributed child porn via WhatsApp.

In what has been described as one of the largest ever operations against child porn Spanish National Police led an operation which involved Interpol and Europol.

They moved against 14 groups on the instant messaging service which were dedicated exclusively to 'extreme brutality on children up to eight years old.'

So far 19 arrests have been made after 19 homes were searched. A total of 11 laptops, 23 mobile phones, four tablets, 11 external hard drives, seven pen drives and five large capacity memory cards were seized and found to contain millions of child porn images and videos.

Police are now trying to identify the children abused.

Those arrested had tried to use sophisticated encryption programs to hide their illegal activities.

A specialist unit of the National Police was able to penetrate the networks and identify 14 chat groups, 58 users and huge amounts of shared files.

Investigators also discovered that the illegal activity was not limited to Spain, but extended to another seven countries in Europe and America.

Those arrested came from Alicante, Oviedo, Barcelona, Burgos, Cordoba, Granada, Palma de Mallorca, Jaen, Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Leon, Madrid, Murcia, Santander, Tarragona, Teruel, Valencia and Valladolid.

The three alleged leaders of the gang failed in the attempt and now find themselves behind bars awaiting trial.

They were amongst 17 arrested in a National Police operation aimed at shutting down a series of drugs dens in Alicante City.

These allowed users to not only buy drugs but also gave them a 'safe' space to consume them, with 24-hour video security in place to warn of police raids.

National Police launched an operation to shut down the dens more than a year ago and with this latest phase of the operation claim they have now succeeded, with the problem 'almost completely eradicated.'

The latest gang to be broken up used one apartment as a warehouse from which to distribute heroin to a series of apartments used as drugs dens.

Police say they seized three-and-a-half kilos of the narcotic, enough for about 350,000 doses.

SEIZED: Police discovered €4m worth of heroin.

Too hot to handle

By Matt Ford, Tara Rippin
and Joe Gerrard

THE death toll has risen to at least nine after Spain was gripped by a scorching heatwave.

A 40-year-old German holiday-maker walking the Camino de Santiago pilgrimage was the latest victim after he succumbed to heatstroke in the eastern region of Extremadura.

It comes after the mercury soared to 46°C in parts of the country over the weekend, just short of the all-time record of 47.3°C set in Montoro, Córdoba, last summer.

series of forest blazes which broke out in the wake of the sizzling conditions.

Alerts for extreme fire risk were issued across the country, with Civil Protection warning against throwing cigarette ends from vehicles or leaving rubbish, especially empty glass bottles, in the sun.

Nature scare

Two wildfires in Huelva Province, Andalucía, were eventually brought under control by more than 200 firefighters, 10 helicopters and four large capacity aeroplanes after flames ripped through forest near the tourist village of Almonaster la Real and nearby Calañas.

They followed hours after more than 1,700 hectares of land were burned in the municipality of Nerva, also close by, with police now probing whether the three incidents were the result of arson.

And a blaze near La Jonquera in the Pyrenees mountains, Cataluña, forced the closure of the border with France for several hours.

Thousands evacuated

Thousands of people were evacuated from their homes as fire ripped through the mountain range of of Llutxent in Valencia.

An estimated 1,400 hectares of forest is believed to have been destroyed in the blaze which saw 2,500 people seek refuge.

The Military Emergency Unit dispatched 120 troops, 25 vehicles, and nine aircraft, 12 forestry brigades.

The fire started in the Pujol de Llutxent area but continued to move uncontrollably northwards until it threatened the natural area of El Surar, an environmental reserve protected for its ecological wealth.

Panic in Portugal

Hundreds of firefighters were deployed in the Algarve to tackle a wildfire which spread towards the Spanish border.

At least 740 firefighters, 12 aircraft and 122 vehicles headed to the Sierra de Monchique to tackle the blaze which broke out last Friday and remained out of control five days later, with smoke clouding the skies of beaches packed with sunbathers.

Spain sent two large aircraft to help Portuguese emergency services fight the fire and unconfirmed reports on Monday placed the number of personnel on the ground at more than 1,000.

The blaze later spread near to the towns of Tavira and Vila Real de Santo Antonio, both of which lie near Portugal's border with Huelva.

At least 29 people were injured and several firefighters received medical attention for exposure to heat and smoke.

Balcony plunge horror

Brit fell six floors while 'having a poo'

by Matt Ford

A BRITISH holidaymaker is fighting for his life after plummeting six floors while allegedly relieving himself over a Mallorca hotel balcony.

The unnamed 25-year-old is believed to have fallen from the sixth floor of the TRH Magaluf and hit an interior patio head first.

Local reports suggest he lost his balance after dropping his trousers and squatting over the edge of the balcony just before 3.30am.

Images of the victim lying on the ground surrounded by police officers and medics appeared in a Spanish newspaper.

And distressing video footage shows a tourist thought to be a friend or relative breaking down in tears after arriving at the scene.

He can be heard shouting "no, no, no" before a blonde woman appears to comfort him and the pair are led away by a police officer.

Guardia Civil investigators confirmed they are probing the incident as an official confirmed: "The matter is under investigation."

British holidaymaker Andrew Rhys Phillips was last May hospitalised after falling from the first floor at the same hotel.

The 18-year-old from West Belfast hurt his hip and spine and medics said he had been admitted to intensive care at Palma's Son Espases Hospital.

The accidents are the latest in a spate of balcony falls involving British and Irish tourists in Mallorca this year, in which seven people have died.

Airport 'suicide'

A RYANAIR pilot found dead at a Spanish airport is thought to have committed suicide.

It comes after Captain Joke Schrale, 45, failed to turn up for a short-haul flight from Malaga to Brussels.

The Dutchman, who lived in Mijas on the Costa del Sol and was known to friends as Jake, reportedly died in his vehicle in a staff car park.

The 8.30am flight was delayed for hours while a replacement pilot was organised.

A well-placed source told UK media: "He'd never missed a flight in 15 years and so people knew something must be wrong."

An official from the budget Irish airline said: "His colleagues are in deep shock. We offer our deepest sympathy."

Captain Schrale had been flying with the carrier for a decade, and leaves behind partner Jessica.

A tribute on Facebook read: "Rest in peace Captain Joke Schrale. In this moment of sorrow we express our most sincere condolences to the family and we embrace each other in a fraternal embrace. High skies for you Captain!"

Ryanair pilots and cabin crew have recently held a series of strikes over working conditions, sparking travel chaos across Europe.

What a difference a day makes...

By Sam Kelly, Managing Partner, Chorus Financial.

I have written articles in the past highlighting the damaging effects that inflation can have on your long-term savings. Over 10 years, inflation can lose you over 25% of the spending power of your savings. The reality is, many of us have savings set aside for a rainy day, and often that rainy day is many years, or indeed decades, away. Investing is part of everyday life for the majority of us. Whether you have a pension, you own a property, you have an ISA or some shares, you're an investor. But are you a wise investor or are you just leaving it to chance?

In January 2016 the world was ending, the financial markets lost two-trillion dollars in a month... by the end of 2016 the markets were at record highs, and the turbulent start to the year was just a distant memory. Over two centuries of market data have shown that every bear market (when markets go down) is followed by a more powerful bull market (when markets go up).

JP Morgan did a study of the S+P 500 (an index of America's leading companies) over the last 20 years which showed average annual returns to investors of 8.2%, so effectively doubling your money every 9 years based on compound growth. But, if over those 20 years you'd been out of the market during the 10 best trading days, your growth would've fallen from 8.2% per year to 4.5%. If you missed the 20 best trading days, so just 1 day a year over 20 years, your returns would've fallen to just 2%. This vividly highlights the importance of staying invested over the long term.

Statistics like this show the benefits of long term investing, but if you are taking this approach it is absolutely essential you are in the right type of investments in the first place.

From day one, Chorus Financial have been very clear and honest in terms of how we invest our client's money. When we choose funds, we rigorously research the market, using decades of experience and expertise, and put together a diverse portfolio of fully regulated funds. Every portfolio is individually designed for our client's long term financial aspirations and will never contain hidden fees, so you know it's being recommended with only your best interests in mind. Our motivations are entirely aligned with yours; to see your portfolio grow.

A Chorus portfolio will always be suitable for your attitude to risk and will only contain funds from well-known and trusted household names like Rathbone Brothers PLC, Investec, HSBC, Royal London, The Prudential and Fidelity.

DEGREE CLAIMS: Casado (centre) denied any wrongdoing.

Court to weigh leader claims

SPAIN'S Supreme Court is set to decide on whether to hear a case in connection with allegations that the leader of the conservative Partido Popular (PP) wrongfully gained a degree.

Judge Carmen Rodríguez-Medel, an investigative judge in Madrid, has referred the case to Supreme Court justices after finding signs of wrongdoing over a regional law masters awarded to Pablo Casado.

The PP leader got the degree from the University of King Juan Carlos' Public Law Institute in Madrid in 2009.

Casado said there was no evidence he was guilty of the charges.

"What they've done to me, they haven't done to anyone else in this country or in any other country. I am not under investigation by any court and there is no evidence of guilt against me," he said.

Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez, of the governing left-leaning Partido Socialista (PSOE), said the PP leader owed the Spanish people 'explanations' over the allegations.

Casado has admitted that he did not attend classes at the Public Law Institute. He added he did not sit exams or present his dissertation.

The university waived 18 out of 22 modules as he already had a law degree from Madrid's Complutense University. He was required to produce four papers which are now subject to an investigation.

Judge Rodríguez-Medel's court said it could not hear the case as Casado is protected by immunity laws for public officials. The Supreme Court will decide whether the case can go ahead in light of the immunity status.

Casado was a regional deputy when he obtained the degree. This means he could have a case to answer over accepting gifts offered based on his public position and for abetting illegal decisions from civil servants.

The probe comes as Cristina Cifuentes, the PP President of the Madrid region, was forced to resign in April after facing allegations she falsified her degree. Casado was elected as leader of the PP on July 21.

Painkiller 'killing Brits'

RESEARCH has shown that at least ten Britons have died after taking one of Spain's most popular painkillers, Nolotil, which is banned in the UK.

In addition, more than 100 British and Irish expatriates and tourists in Spain have suffered devastating side effects after taking the drug.

The medicines regulator in Spain confirmed yesterday (Saturday) that it had launched an investigation into concerns that northern Europeans may be more at risk of side effects from Nolotil.

The painkiller has not been licensed in many countries, including the United States, Britain and Sweden, because of a possible side effect which can lead to blood poisoning and death.

DEADLY? Nolotil.

Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency, London, said: "We have known for a long time that because of genetic differences people from particular ethnic groups can have higher probability of risk or benefit from certain medicines.

The regulators, therefore, require analysis of safety and efficacy data by population, gender and age."

The Spanish Agency of Food and Medical Devices said it was gathering more evidence on the cases.

Boehringer Ingelheim, the manufacturer of Nolotil, responded in a statement:

"We take very seriously every case where a patient suffers an adverse event.

"Nolotil must not be given without a prescription. There is no scientific evidence on specific populations that are prone to develop any side effects."

Drug driver kills

TWO cyclists were killed and two others injured following a collision with a car driven by a drug driver in the north of Spain.

An 18-year-old man was arrested at the scene and has since been charged with reckless driving and driving under the influence of narcotics as well as causing the death of the two cyclists, thought to be aged between 50 and 60.

Two other riders, who were cycling with the victims, were slightly injured having been rammed by the same vehicle on the T-310 at Tarrogon on Sunday.

The Catalan Traffic Service believes the driver swerved into the opposite lane, 'overwhelming' the group of cyclists, and causing the instant death of two of them.

Nothing to quake about

EARTH tremors are normal geological events in the north of Alicante Province, Pedro Alfaro Garcia said.

With a doctorate in Geology, Alfaro lectures in Geodynamics at Alicante University and sent out a reassuring message regarding the Marina Alta's six recent tremors.

The latest, a very mild 1.9 on the Richter scale, was the second with an epicentre beneath Benissa, but like the first was at a depth between 11 and 12 kilometres. It was hardly noticeable and caused no damage.

The magnitude 5 earthquake that devastated Lorca (Murcia) in 2011 unleashed an energy 1,000 times greater than the magnitude 3 earthquake which heralded the Marina Alta's recent seismic activity, Alfaro pointed out.

"In Alicante Province, we have a line linking Alicante City with Elche, Crevillente, Albaterra and Abanilla in Murcia, where there is one type of geology above it to the north and another type below it to the south," the geologist said.

"The south, which has the most important faults, is the most active. They are the best-known and this is where most earthquakes occur," he explained.

"The northern half of Alicante Province which is the most mountainous, historically has less activity so it has been investigated less and its faults are much less known," Alfaro Garcia continued.

A FORMER head of the Basque nationalist ETA terror group has been released from a Salamanca prison after being behind bars for 31 years on a string of murder convictions.

Santiago Arrospide Saradola, also known as Santi Potros, was pictured walking out of Topas prison last Sunday at around 8.15am. He was accompanied by three family members and did not stop to make a statement to reporters.

Potros was found guilty of being behind some 40 killings which resulted from ETA attacks he helped to plan. He served 13 years of his sentence in France and 18 in Spain and was originally jailed for 70 years.

Attacks included one in Madrid's Plaza de la Republica Dominicana in 1986 and another at the Hipercor shopping centre in Barcelona which left some 21 people dead in 1987.

Groups including the Association of the Victims of Terrorism (AVT) have said they are concerned Potros could receive a hero's welcome from supporters when he returns to the Basque Country.

Carmen Ladron de Guevara, an AVT lawyer, said psychologists with the group would be monitoring victims of ETA attacks who were most likely to be affected by his release.

The Collective of Victims of Terrorism (COVITE) said on Twitter that the release made Sunday a day to remember victims of the group's attacks.

Fernando Grande-Marlaska,

Ex-ETA boss freed

RELEASED: Santi Potros was a leading member of ETA.

Spain's Interior Minister, said the government would be monitoring the situation.

"If there is a crime which constitutes the glorification of terrorism or contempt for its victims then that is what the state security forces are there for," Grande-Marlaska said.

Potros first joined the ETA in 1968 and was arrested in France in 1987 on 11 charges in connection with the group's attacks.

ETA, or Euskadi Ta Askatasuna (Basque Homeland and Liberty), was established in 1959 in the Basque region of northern Spain and southern France.

It morphed from a group promoting Basque culture, language and traditions into a paramilitary organisation dedicated to achieving independence for the region by violent means.

It wound up its operations after announcing it had given up its weapons and ceased activities earlier this year.

Several countries have listed the group as a terrorist organisation and more than 820 people, including 340 civilians, were killed during its attacks. More than 300 of its members are in prison in Spain, France and elsewhere.

'Wolfpack' member jailed

CREDIT: Google Maps

IN COURT: Angel Boza appeared before Sevilla's Court of Instruction Number 16 yesterday.

A COURT in Sevilla has remanded Angel Boza, the youngest member of the La Manada ('Wolfpack' in English) gang, in custody without bail after he was charged with attempted robbery.

Boza, 26, was arrested in Sevilla on Thursday. He stands accused of attempting to steal a pair of sunglasses worth almost €200 and of trying to run over two security guards.

Agustin Martinez, the lawyer acting for Boza, called on justices not to add more bail conditions to ones previously handed down by Navarra's Superior Court of Justice.

The Navarra court bailed

Boza and the four other men convicted of sexually assaulting an 18-year-old woman at Pamplona's San Fermin festival pending an appeal.

"The conditions connected with the Pamplona case were strictly observed. It would not make sense for them to be expanded," Martinez said.

Refugee camp opens

New arrivals flood coast as populism fears grow

By Joe Gerrard

SPAIN'S Interior Ministry has opened a temporary refugee camp in the Algeciras area to house the growing number of migrants arriving in Spain.

It comes after Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez said his government will set up a command centre to coordinate Madrid's response to the increasing influx of Africans crossing the Strait of Gibraltar into Spain.

The site, set up on a field in Crinavis near San Roque in Cadiz Province, is set to house migrants arriving at three ports in the province.

It comes as European Union (EU) officials said the handling of the migrant situation could fuel a rise in anti-immigration political populism.

The first 442 people arrived at the camp last Saturday. The facility, which has beds, toilets and showers, can house a maximum of 600 people for 72 hours.

Jose Medina, a migrant co-ordinator, said the camp would shelter people rescued and taken to Tarifa, Barbate and Algeciras.

The facility is set to take in 400 people every 24 hours as those who complete their 72-hour stay leave, Medina added.

Pepe Villahoz, of the Acoge immigration advocacy group, said they were concerned by the uncertainty arrivals faced.

"Protocols to deal with migrants have never been established and resources have not been allocated to solve the issue," Villahoz said.

The opening of the camp follows a pledge from European Union member states to set up migrant reception centres at June's Paris summit.

The new facility also comes as EU officials said they would support Spain on migration.

Dimitri Avramopoulos, the EU Commissioner for Migration, said during his Madrid visit last Friday that Spain would receive additional resources to address the issue.

"Spain has the full support of the European Commission in dealing with the increased arrivals along the western Mediterranean Sea route," he said.

EU officials are concerned the Spanish electorate could be wooed by politicians standing on radical anti-immigration platforms.

The officials reportedly fear a rerun of populist parties including the far right La Liga in Italy being elected and the success of others in Austria and elsewhere.

"At the moment, we cannot afford to lose Spain," one unnamed senior EU official reportedly said.

Pablo Casado, the new leader of the conservative Partido Popular (PP), has begun moving his party to the right on migration.

He recently claimed Spain could not accommodate the 'millions' of people arriving on its southern frontier. The far right Vox political party also organised a meeting in Algeciras on Wednesday to address what they claimed was a migrant 'invasion.'

Sergio Carrera, of the Centre for European Policy Studies (CEPS) think tank, said the Spanish government had the right approach to the issue. "The response of the Spanish government has been correct, putting the figures in perspective and showing that we are not facing a crisis," he said.

Many of the migrants are refugees fleeing war, conflict and poverty in sub Saharan Africa. More than 23,000 migrants have arrived in Spain so far this year, according to statistics from the United Nations.

Graffiti sparks outrage

AUTHORITIES at the Cathedral of Santiago de Compostela have spoken out after arriving at the holy site to find a statue covered in graffiti mimicking the American rock band Kiss.

Vandals are believed to have targeted the statue, which dates from the 12th century, at the cathedral which is part of a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The building is located in the Galicia region.

The city council said workers arrived at the holy building to find the statue defaced last Monday. The sculpture is located on one of the building's facades and those responsible remained at large yesterday (Thursday).

Martin Noriega, Santiago's mayor, said on Twitter the graffiti was an attack on the city's heritage and on its citizens.

"It shows a lack of civility and respect," the mayor said.

Pictures of the statue showed its face covered with graffiti which mimicked the make-up of Kiss drummer Peter Criss, also known by his stage name 'The Catman.' The vandal also scrawled the band's name on a document the figure is holding.

spokesperson, said the graffiti was a "barbarity" and a cultural attack.

"Penalties for such actions can range from €6,000 to €150,000," he said.

Daniel Lorenzo, the director of the cathedral's foundation, said workers had begun cleaning the statue last Monday.

The Cathedral of Santiago de Compostela is believed to be the burial place of St James, one of Jesus Christ's 12 apostles.

The site marks the traditional end of the Way of St James pilgrimage route and thousands visit it and the city every year.

Mayor Noriega said the city was very open and tolerant towards visitors but added it would not tolerate the vandalising of its historical sites.

Kiss were formed in New York City in 1973. They went on to score hits with the songs such as Love Gun and Crazy Crazy Nights.

Bleach attack charge

A WOMAN in her 60's has been jailed for killing her friend with bleach fumes after an attack of extreme violence in Alfafar, Valencia.

A jury heard how the two sextagenarians were in the bathroom of the victim's home when an argument exploded into extreme violence.

Harsh words led to the victim pushing her friend - an act that would lead to her own death.

A red mist descended on the killer, who knocked the victim to the floor, snatched up a porcelain toilet brush and hit the woman over the head with it so hard it snapped.

Stunned and by now helpless, the victim then had her head repeatedly smashed against the edge of a bathtub.

The killer then sprayed the unconscious woman's wounds with bleach before closing the bathroom door due to the strong fumes - an act which would finish the victim off.

Emergency services were called by the aggressor's son, but they were unable to save the woman who died in the ambulance on the way to hospital due to fluid in the lungs and brain, which was caused by a lack of oxygen and the bleach fumes.

Judges at a Valencia court jailed the unnamed aggressor for 15 years after applying a reduction for the killer's full confession.

HOLIDAY HORROR: The alleged assault took place in Arona.

By Matt Ford

A MOROCCAN man has been held in Valencia in connection with the sexual assault on a British OAP in Tenerife.

The 25-year-old is suspected of violating the unnamed victim, 74, during a break in at a holiday apartment on the holiday island.

He has reportedly been remanded in custody ahead of a court appearance following his arrest in the city's Plaza del Mercado.

A police statement said: "National Police officers have arrested a 25-year-old Moroccan man in Valencia on suspicion of a sex attack and robbery in Tenerife."

"He allegedly got into an apartment in Arona via the balcony in May and sexually attacked a 74-year-old British woman before taking her belongings.

"He was arrested in Valencia and has been handed over to the courts."

"The incident in question took place on May 13 at apartments in a tourist part of Arona."

"The woman victim was staying at the apartments."

What will I need to sell my property in Spain?

There are many guides on buying a property in Spain, but what are the steps to follow when you wish to sell your Spanish property? What documentation will you need? And as a vendor what are your obligations?

Documents that need to be presented to the buyer's lawyer before the sale of the property in question;

- Power of attorney.
- Private purchase contract.
- A copy of the deeds.
- Land registry search certificate.
- A copy of last water, electricity and gas invoices.
- The last property tax invoice (IBI) or even 4 years behind in case the vendor is non-resident.
- Non-infraction certificate (Certificado de no infracción) from the local town hall.
- A copy of your valid NIE / DNI numbers and Passport.
- Certificate of first or second occupation (Certificado de primera o segunda ocupación) from the local town hall.
- A copy of the certificate from the community of owners.
- Energy certificate.
- Tax certificate proving resident or non-resident.

The buyers and their lawyers may wish to have the property surveyed before committing themselves fully to the purchase of the property.

Please note on the day of the sale you will need to have originals of the abovementioned documentation to show the Public Notary.

The vendor's obligations are:

To pay capital gain tax if applies as resident or non-resident.

To pay the plusvalía tax and previous utility bills.

To inform the supply companies (electricity, water, gas, etc...), the town hall and the community of owners that you are no longer the owner of the property.

At Pellicer & Heredia we can help you sell your property in Spain, quickly and easily, and provide you expert advice that could save you thousands of euros.

If you are not in Spain at the moment, we can represent you and do all the paperwork on your behalf.

Tot mauled

A GIRL aged two is in hospital after being mauled by an American Staffordshire terrier.

She was visiting the dog's owner with her family when the animal turned on her and bit her on the cheek.

The girl was treated locally in Massamagrel before being transferred to the Hospital Clínico de Valencia. According to hospital sources she had been kept in but her condition is 'evolving favourably.'

The owner of the dog, a man aged 27, is being investigated for a crime of injury, while the dog has been taken to an animal shelter in El Puig. There it remains in quarantine until a judge determines its fate.

PSOE tops election poll

by Joe Gerrad

THE results of an opinion survey have found that Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez's left-leaning Partido Socialista (PSOE) would win a general election if one is called early.

The poll, from the Sociological Research Centre (CIS), found that almost 30 per cent of its respondents would vote for PSOE in an early election. The party came to power two months ago following a no confidence motion.

Adriana Las-tra, the party's spokesperson in the Congress of Deputies, said it was the first time since 2009 that the PSOE had topped the survey.

The poll placed the conservative Partido Popular (PP), who were ousted from government following the motion, second with 20.4 per cent of respondents backing them. They came joint second with the centrist Ciudadanos party.

Support for political parties

A total of 15.6 per cent of those surveyed said they would vote for the leftist anti-austerity Podemos party in the CIS's latest quarterly survey.

The previous quarterly survey, released in April, placed the PSOE second with 22 per cent of respondents backing them. The PP, in government at the time, came first with 24 per cent.

SUPPORT SURGE: Pedro Sanchez's party would win an early election according to pollsters.

There are currently 84 PSOE members in the Congress of Deputies, Spain's lower house of parliament, out of 350 lawmakers. The party has 62 out of 266 seats in the Senate, making it the government with the smallest minority in Spain's democratic history.

The poll was taken shortly before the PP chose Pablo Casado to succeed predecessor, and former prime minister, Mariano Rajoy.

Casado stood on a platform of moving the party to the right on a number of issues including abortion and migration. He also floated banning independence parties such as those in Cataluña in a bid to thwart their independence ambitions.

The new PP leader met with Sanchez in Madrid at his official residence of La Moncloa on Wednesday.

The results of the poll come as the PSOE marked two months since they toppled the PP government on Wednesday.

The party came to power after the then ruling PP became embroiled in the Gurtel corruption scandal.

The motion passed with 180 votes in favour and 169 against, after Sanchez secured the backing of regionalist parties.

The PP became the first party to be ousted by a no confidence motion since Spain transitioned to democracy in the late 1970's.

Business as usual

RADIO ALTEA recently had problems with the apparatus which emits the signal throughout the municipality.

The town hall's Communications and New Technology department had already foreseen possible problems which it prevented by ordering new broadcasting equipment which has now been installed.

"Now that we've solved the problem, listeners can again tune in anywhere in Altea and hear all programmes perfectly," said Communications Councilor, Pere Barber.

He explained that the new transmitter had cost €10,000 and the signal booster on the Sierra Bernia antenna would also be renewed.

"Air conditioning has been installed in the hut which houses the apparatus so that it will not be affected by the high summer temperatures," Barber added.

He also apologised to Radio Altea listeners for the interruption in broadcasts which will now continue as usual on FM107.6.

Wrong place

THE poster designed by Sybille Schlotter for Altea's fiestas depicts Bernia with fireworks emerging from a tuba, plus a fiesta queen with attendants. They wear a version of regional dress not used in Altea and their sashes clearly bear La Nucia's crest. Fiesta's Councillor Vicent Ripoll claimed he saw girls in regional dress 'that's all.'

the ins and outs of the ongoing dig. The group also visited places of interest in Alfaz and the surrounding area.

With the cooperation of Valencian Community town halls, IVAJ has organised 15 projects for young volunteers this summer.

Getting to know you

ALTEA'S foreign residents recently attended a series of information sessions on how the local administration functions.

The sessions subsidised by Alicante's Provincial Council, the Diputacion, were designed to encourage the residents' integration into the municipality's day-to-day life, while enabling them to enjoy the same social, economic and cultural opportunities as Altea's Spanish residents.

This in turn should help non-Spanish residents to make their own contribution to local life and take part in all the municipality's activities, explained Mari Lavios, Altea's Citizen

INFORMATION SESSIONS: Residents from Europe, Russia, Canada and Mexico.

Participation councillor.

"These sessions have also informed Altea's foreign residents about their rights and the resources which are available to them and can help to improve their quality of life,"

Lavios continued.

"When you live in a foreign country it can be confusing if you can't count on support."

Those attending were from several different European countries.

Starting them young

TWO Alfaz schools will begin the next academic year with experimental classes for two-year-olds.

The regional government gave the go ahead to the Santísimo Cristo del Buen Acierto and Raco de l'Albir state schools where classrooms are now being prepared for the toddlers.

The town hall is meeting the cost of equipping these teaching spaces in line with the requirements of the Generalitat's Education department. This is being carried out by municipal workers from the town hall's Technical Services department and is expected to cost around €15,000.

If all goes to plan the Valencian Community will have 35 new classrooms for two-year-olds at the start of the school year in September, bringing the three provinces' total up to 130.

Civil Defence, Spanish-style

JOSE RIVAS FERRER is Alfaz's new Proteccion Civil chief.

Alfaz's mayor Vicente Arques, accompanied by Public Safety Councillor Genoveva Tent, presented him with the insignias identifying him as leader of the local Civil Defence branch.

Rivas Ferrer, who has been awarded the Bronze Medal with Blue Ribbon, joined Proteccion Civil as a volunteer 16 years ago.

"One of my priorities is to bring in more members, because at present there are only 15 of us," Rivas said.

Joining the local Proteccion Civil branch is open to all Alfaz residents who are over 18.

Volunteers take an active part in protecting and guaranteeing the safety of their fellow citizens, working with the security forces on all types of missions.

Come rain or come shine

ALTEA now has two weather stations. One is located in Altea's Casa de Cultura and the other in Altea la Vieja, announced Public Safety councillor Vicent Ripoll.

"We acquired the equipment so that we could know exactly what was happening, meteorologically-speaking, inside the town," Ripoll said.

"Residents will be able to request, through the town, the necessary reports when making insurance claims after extreme weather conditions have affected the municipality," he pointed out.

The Altea weather stations are programmed to send a text message to municipal departments involved whenever they detect possible risks for the population.

"This will also be useful when organising public events, fiestas or open-air activities," Ripoll added.

"The Altea and Altea la Vieja meteorological service includes a website where all information that information compiled by the stations can be

Fiestas award

CALPE Council voted during the last plenary meeting to award the Jaume Pastor i Fluixa 9 d'octubre prize to the Crist de la Suor Moors and Christians' Association, in recognition of the group's contribution to keeping the fiesta's tradition alive 'while filling the streets of the municipality with colour.'

Generous parents foot the bill

LUCIA TENZA, Calpe's fiestas' queen, recently announced that her parents were paying for the two concerts during the celebrations.

She confirmed the gesture with a WhatsApp, explaining that her family were paying for the performances by Andy & Lucas and Manu Tenorio.

"The fiestas' queen is inviting you to come and it's free, so pass the message on," Lucia said.

She was elected on June 30 and because her family arranged the two concerts in record time neither event was included in the fiestas' programme.

Calpe's mayor Cesar Sanchez said that the town hall had collaborated in organising the events.

Limited edition

IFACH: Valencian Community's most-visited national park.

ACCESS to the Peñon de Ifach national park will be regulated throughout August.

The national park receives more visits than any other in the Valencian Community and the Generalitat's Environment department has taken this step to avoid a build-up of people on the path leading to the top of the 332-metre Peñon.

"The path can safely accommodate 150 people at a time," the department explained, "and 20 people will be admitted every 15 minutes."

Admittance will be controlled once there are more than 150 on the Peñon path, although this will not apply to the exhibition or the Miradores de Levante route, taking in the area's lookout point.

CALPE Town Hall must pay an extra €208,400 in compensation to nine employees dismissed six years ago.

A total of €968,000 will have been paid out in a case going back to 2012 when the mayor, Cesar Sanchez, sacked 14 workers during cutbacks in town hall spending.

Opposition parties on the local council claimed there were political motives behind the dismissals, which they compared to a witch-hunt.

Crisis cutback comes dear

Five years later, the Supreme Court ruled that the decision made by Sanchez's office was not lawful and, after annulling the dismissals, ordered the town hall to readmit the employees.

In February last year, the local government decided to readmit them but by March had fired nine of them, telling them that their services were no longer required.

Since May last year the town hall has had to pay a total of €600,000 in compensation, plus €160,000 in social security payments, and a Benidorm judge has now fixed the specific amount which each worker should receive, adding a further €208,400 to the bill.

Three-car collision on N-332

A 30-YEAR-OLD woman from Madrid had to be freed from her car following a multiple collision on the N-332 in Calpe.

The accident, involving three vehicles, occurred at 8.30pm at the entrance to the Mascarat tunnels and the narrow section of main road was closed to traffic while firefighters from Benissa and Benidorm were called in.

They had to work against time to cut the woman free and remove her through the rear door of her vehicle as she had several injuries and needed to be urgently transferred to Denia hospital.

Sun trap

A DRIVER was temporarily blinded by the sun on the Teulada-Moraira road and ran into a rubbish collection lorry from municipally-owned Teuma Servies which was emptying containers at 7.45am. Both drivers, as well as two operatives, required attention from paramedics while the Local Police and Guardia Civil redirected traffic until the road was cleared.

FEDER FUNDS: Generalitat president Ximo Puig and Carlos Linares in Valencia.

CARLOS LINARES recently signed the agreement with Generalitat president Ximo Puig releasing FEDER funds for the Cap d'Or site.

Once completed the project will also provide the town with a highly valuable archaeological and cultural site, Linares said.

Teulada-Moraira's mayor visited Valencia City with Alicante Province mayors who have also received grants from the European Regional Development Fund (FEDER) which are channelled through the regional government.

Like Teulada-Moraira, they will use the cash for local cultural, tourism or mobility projects under the collaboration programme between the province's town halls and the Generalitat Valenciana to restore the local patrimony.

Last January, Teulada-Moraira councillor Raul Dalmau flew to Brussels to explain firsthand the town's plans for the Cap d'Or, and also the Cova de les Cendres, which is regarded as one of the region's most interesting and valuable prehistoric Mediterranean sites.

He went expressly to see Ramon Luis Valcarcel, one of the vice presidents of the European Parliament, to explain in person the Cap d'Or-Cova de les Cendres project in a bid to obtain the FEDER grant.

More police on the beat

TEULADA - MORAIRA has four new Local Police officers.

Brought in to cover and improve the municipality's public safety requirements, they will remain until December 31 at least, the town hall revealed.

"The aim of the Local Police and Teulada Town Hall is to provide an efficient, good quality service for the local population and visitors, answering all their needs," municipal sources said.

Taking on the extra officers in August will also help to reinforce safety on the town's beaches and in tourist areas, the sources added.

Court cases 'deplete the budget' claim

THE Red party on Teulada-Moraira Council pointed out that legal action has cost the town hall approximately €80,000.

An Alicante court recently found in favour of the former chief inspector of the Local Police and invalidated his dismissal after he was removed from his post.

The town hall has now been ordered to readmit him and bring his salary payments up to date, plus interest, from the time he was suspended as chief inspector.

Red, which is the principal opposition party at the town hall, pointed out that justice had prevailed in an irregular suspension decree which, in the words of the judge, was 'issued as though in a private estate.'

"The case will cost the town hall around €50,000," the Red party spokesman said.

"This sentence, together with other legal proceedings brought by the chief inspector against the town hall, comes to approximately €80,000, and it should be borne in mind that this amount could increase.

"A further verdict is expected from the Valencian Community's Upper Court of Justice and presumably Teulada-Moraira Town Hall will have to pay out yet again."

A market for time travellers

Mayor Carlos Linares and Estrella Agusti.

TEULADA-MORAIRA will again be recreating the medieval era with a craft market.

Beginning tomorrow (Friday) until Sunday it will open each night in Teulada's Old Town between 6.30pm and 1.30am.

The event begins with an opening parade and the flag will be run up as the fiestas' queen declares the market open.

The market organised by Estrella Agusti will take Teulada-Moraira residents and visitors back in time with stalls located principally in Carrer de Dalt and Carrer Cervantes.

Golden shot

THE fifth edition of the regional paddle tennis tournament began earlier this week in Teulada-Moraira and continues until this Sunday, with five masculine and five feminine categories. The tournament is open to both amateur and professional players, and this year it will be classed for the first time as a Gold Circuit competition.

False news

PUBLIC WORKS and Town Planning councillor Raul Dalmau refuted accusations of 'anomalies' regarding the Socio-Cultural centre.

The claims were made public some days ago by Hector Morales, secretary general of the local PSPV-PSOE socialist party who said that flaws in the building would almost certainly lead to a budget overrun.

This had already happened with the municipal swimming pool, Morales pointed out.

Dalmau answered the socialist claims point-by-point in a video which he uploaded to the social media while drawing attention to Morales' 'scant credibility and disinformation regarding this project.'

A rubbish situation

SOME of the anglers who use the ancient, hidden pesqueres are leaving an antisocial amount of litter behind them.

Once, the local men who fished from outcrops of rock on Javea's cliffs did so out of necessity to help feed their families, but now these are used by anglers who do not always take their empty tins, picnic wrappers, bait boxes and used lines away with them.

"Although they are in a minority," municipal sources said, "they are damaging an already delicate ecosystem."

Most of the anglers clean up conscientiously before leaving their privileged perches - aware that the survival of the historic pesqueres depends on protecting the environment.

Groups like the L'Institut de Recerca Oceanografica de Xabia (IROX) have called for the pesqueres to receive town hall protection. Many are no longer usable as access is blocked by clifftop villas, and IROX members regularly clean up the mess that some of the anglers leave on the cliffs.

Javea Town Hall also helps to clean up the cliffs each spring,

Not parking pretty

DESPITE yellow lines and 'No Parking' signs, beachgoers heading for the Portitxol and Ambolo beaches continue to park where they should not.

"Vehicles obstruct the road, making it difficult for others to pass, and the constant coming and going is creating chaos despite the new roundabout at the end of the Portitxol beach," municipal sources admitted.

It can also be dangerous in an emergency. Last year the Red Cross pickup van had to be used to evacuate a man suffering from a heart attack as the ambulance could not get through owing to inconsiderately- and irregularly-parked cars.

The only option at present is to fine the owners, while the town hall seeks a long-term answer that can be applied next season.

If you're going to San Francisco ...

THREE girls from the Maria Inmaculada school in Javea are representing Europe in the Technovation Challenge 2018 in San Francisco.

Third year ESO pupils Amelia Gonzalez, Andrea Escortell and Ines Mut heard about the Technovation Challenge by word of mouth and it was so interesting that they decided to register to take part.

The competition sets out to encourage girls aged between 10 and 18 to take an interest in science, technology and entrepreneurship.

More than 19,000 girls worldwide are taking part in Technovation 2018, building apps and starting businesses that can help to solve problems in their communities.

"This is a unique experience which has required a great deal of effort and hard work practically every day for the girls," said teacher Rose Mari Bosch who has accompanied the girls to San Francisco.

Amelia, Andrea and Ines will be representing Europe with 'Join us,' a mobile app to prevent Javea's senior citizens from feeling lonely by putting them in touch with young people, producing an cultural and general interchange.

Burn-out

A RUBBISH collection lorry, which caught fire in the early hours of the morning in Plaza Marina Alta in central Javea, was entirely burnt-out despite prompt action by the Local Police and Denia's fire brigade. The Ronda Norte adjoining the Plaza had to be closed to traffic, and vehicles rerouted along Calle Virgen de los Angeles.

Beach barrier is no barrier

BUSINESS owners dependent on the Granadella beach for their trade are happy with this year's traffic restrictions.

At first sight these appear to be the same as those applied last year, but a restaurateur explained that there were several differences:

"The improvements have been very positive as far as tourist access is concerned," he said, "in these first few weeks we've noticed a change compared with 2017.

"This was the first year that access to the beach had been limited and it was not good for trade," he explained. "It was a sudden decision which affected us all as many people stayed away, believing it was closed.

"This year the barrier is left up until all the parking spaces are taken and this appears to be motivating beachgoers," the restaurateur continued, "as some days the road remains open to traffic until 11.30 or 12 noon."

GRANADELLA: No fall-off in tourists this summer.

Once the barrier comes down, swimmers and sunbathers can still reach Granadella free of charge on the tourist train (trenet) or they can get down to the beach on the bus from the La Guardia park where there is a car park for their own vehicles.

On the buses

A NEW transport concessionary will improve Javea's communications with Valencia City, the regional government announced, linking directly to the high speed AVE railway station and Manises International Airport. The Valencia-Javea-Denia-Benidorm concession will serve a total population of 1,087,661 with a minimum of 12 buses covering 1.8 million kilometres.

Drones work hard

MARINA ALTA mayors and councillors recently met to analyse drone images of the July 8 fire on Montgo.

Javea was represented by Public Safety Gisbert, while the mayors of Denia, Pego and Jesus Pobre also were present at the meeting organised by the region's Safety and Emergency Response Agency (ASRE).

The ASRE director Jose Maria Angel explained that the working meeting highlighted the possibilities that new technology and Remotely Piloted Air Systems (RPAS) can provide.

"Drones are equipped with instruments which tell us what is happening in real time and they allow us to analyse the terrain after a big fire," Angel said.

"But they also provide information when rescuing a person or during a road accident and can provide indicators enabling professionals to respond better in an emergency," he added.

FIRE ANALYSIS: Representatives from Marina Alta town halls given a drone demonstrations.

At the end of the meeting, the mayors and town hall officials went to Montgo where RPAS operators gave a demonstration with a drone that followed the same path as the fire and relayed images of the 10 hectares of burnt woodland.

Cave restrictions

VISITS to Javea's Cova Tallada will not be restricted until 2019, the regional government announced.

In 2016, Joan Sala, president of the Montgo national park's board of governors, stated that the thousand or so people entering the cave each day during the high season were contributing its deterioration.

He recommended limited access to a daily 355, with only 71 people allowed inside at a time, but this will not be implemented until 2019.

A Guide for tourists who want to stop being one

Have you ever heard the term 'Rebost'?

'Rebost' is a Valencian word, its closest meaning would be 'pantry' in English and 'despensa' in Spanish. It is the place where, in years gone by, foods that did not need refrigeration were stored. In most cases that meant fruits and vegetables in season.

Like the restaurants that openly display their kitchens, restaurants that show the contents of their 'rebost' exhibit a certain transparency and confidence in their labours towards their customers.

These days, not many restaurants have a 'rebost' in full view for their customers. Sadly, they miss out on the opportunity to prove that the fruits and vegetables they store are fresh and seasonal. It is something that fell into disuse in modern times, where many decide to eat any vegetable throughout the year, and to top it off, packaged in plastic.

Restaurant Els Tomassets

But if you are not one of those diners, rather you respect the food you eat, then you should definitely get to know the restaurant Els Tomassets, located in Calle Loreto in Dénia. Green beans, asparagus, aubergines, peppers, tomatoes, garlic, artichokes, celery, beets ... all these vegetables are clearly visible in the rebost of Els Tomassets.

The restaurant is a special place where eating becomes more than simple necessity, and embraces instead the level of ritual. The delightful atmosphere of its terraces, together with the superb quality of the food, make a unique and authentic local. Bustle and good humour are common, it is a cheerful Mediterranean place where life effuses and happiness flows.

A menu full of Mediterranean delicatessen that you will be unable to taste so fresh anywhere else. Spacious lounges and charming terraces await, we know that when it comes to eating, environment, light and harmony matter, as well as the guarantee of consuming a fresh and high quality local product at an affordable price.

With more devotees every year, their paellas and cocas are typical dishes of the cuisine of the Marina Alta that so many yearn for. Fresh products, heritage and respect for the culinary tradition of our region, are the flags of a restaurant that simply must be experienced first hand.

Non-residents' income tax

AS we do every summer, we wish to remind readers who are non-tax residents in Spain that they may still be required to pay tax on the value of their property in Spain even if they have no income here.

This tax is based upon the value of your property regardless of whether you rent it out or just use it for your own holidays.

Wealth Tax:

If you are considered a non-tax resident in Spain, or even if you live in Spain but are not registered with the taxman as a tax resident or you do not submit taxes as tax residents, you could be legally considered as a non-tax resident, since no notice may have been given formally to the tax authority.

Carlos Baos

We can help you.

Non-tax residents could be liable to pay wealth tax, but only if the value of their assets in Spain (after deducting debts, eg pending capital on any mortgage, etc) is in excess of €700.000.

Income Tax:

If you are a non-tax resident in Spain (or you are not legally tax resident in Spain), you will need to pay tax for income in Spain (Income Tax for Non Residents, IRNR): rents from a letting, interest on bank accounts, etc.

If you do not have any income but you own a property or a share on a property, your tax bill will be based on a calculation as per the Cadastral Value (value that appears on your Spanish local rates receipt from the town hall, the SUMA office or the equivalent).

Even now it is quite common for people who are non-fiscal residents in Spain (or are not legally tax resident in Spain) to simply not pay this tax; usually due to ignorance or neglect especially when they have no income in Spain and only own a house.

Please notice that if you let your property in Spain, you have an obligation to submit the taxes every three months and not only once a year.

If you are not sure if you are legally or officially either a tax resident or non-tax resident and if you want advice on the best option for you, we can assist by studying your personal situation.

If you are non-tax resident, do not forget to meet your tax obligation if you want to avoid a possible tax inspection or penalties, but to be sure do contact us and we will help you.

A good read

ALCOY City Hall is restoring the municipal archive's oldest Notarial Register.

It was kept between 1296 and 1303 during the reign of Jaume II and is the city's oldest book, after Esborrany de la Cort del Justicia (Court of Justice Notes) which was written between 1263 and 1265.

The Notarial Register measures 290 x 225 millimetres and is written in gothic script. It was bound in parchment and the cover bears the notary's seal but omits his name, although according to entries inside the book he was either Pere Miro or Jaume Jofre.

The documents were copied by various scribes and apart from three in Valenciano all were written in Latin.

The restoration will be carried out by the Valencian Institute of Conservation and Restoration which will be meeting half of the €4,400 cost.

that the Hispano-Arab paper was 'of extraordinarily good quality and made from textile fibre.' The volume has been badly affected by damp and is 'extremely fragile' they added, but the restorers will take steps only to conserve it, without altering its technical and structural characteristics.

It is one of the few books remaining in the Valencian Community from this period and because of this is extremely valuable, the Institute said.

Dip into the past

THE regional government's Culture department has begun visits to the Bou Ferrer underwater archaeological site in Villajoyosa.

These are open to certified divers accompanied by one of the project technicians.

The Bou-Ferrer, named after the two divers who discovered the wrecked Roman galley one kilometre off the Villajoyosa coast in 1999, is the only underwater archaeological site in Spain that can be visited.

Divers have a unique opportunity of viewing a Roman merchant ship that was more than 30 metres long and sank between 64 and 68AD carrying a cargo of more than 2,000 amphorae containing fish sauce and five tons of lead ingots that bear the stamp of the emperor Nero.

Depending on weather conditions, the Bou-Ferrer can be visited by groups of 10 divers on Saturdays and Sundays until September 30.

LOVING MEMORY: Reverend Edwards.

Reverend Canon Peter Edwards

A MEMORIAL communion service has been planned to celebrate the life of Fr Peter, retired senior chaplain of the Costa Blanca Anglican Chaplaincy, who died suddenly on May 4 this year. He was 68.

Canon Peter Clive Edwards attended Ardingly School and then the College of St Mark and St John, Chelsea, where he graduated in 1972 with a degree in English. He taught at Sir William Borlase Grammar School in Marlow, and later at Caterham School.

In 1983, he began training at St Stephen's House, was ordained deacon in 1985 and priest in 1986 in the diocese of Southwark. Peter served his title at St Augustine's, Lee, in Grove Park, before moving to Christ the King, Salfords, where he was vicar from 1990 to 1997. He then moved to St Mary's, Newington, before moving to Spain in 2003.

After a short sabbatical rest, he took up a post in 2004 as a chaplain in the team of Holy Spirit, Costa Blanca, and became senior chaplain in 2009. In 2012, Peter was made a canon of the cathedral chapter of the diocese in Europe. He retired in 2015.

Suffragan Bishop, the Right Reverend Dr David Hamid writes:

"Fr Peter Edwards first moved to Spain to experience a more relaxed pace of life.

"It was not long, however, before his extensive experience as a priest was called upon, and he left his intended retirement to accept the call to lead the team of priests serving the parish of Holy Spirit, Costa Blanca, which is the largest chaplaincy in the diocese in terms of numbers on the electoral roll.

"Under his proficient pastoral oversight as senior chaplain he nurtured a warm, open, accommodating and gently Catholic expression of church life across the eight congregations of the chaplaincy.

"With this he combined gifts of meticulous pastoral care, a sense of humour and a confident, no nonsense approach to church life, he was warmly accepted and appreciated as a colleague by the local Roman Catholic clergy and did much to deepen our ecumenical relations in Costa Blanca.

"On a personal level, as a bishop I was always grateful for Peter's straightforward advice to me, as well as his own genuine care for me as a person and in my ministry. May our Lord now receive his faithful servant Peter into the peace of eternal life."

The memorial service for Father Peter will be held at La Merced church in Calpe, at 4pm on September 12.

SUPER MUM: Mila and pups.

JUST in time ARC agreed to take this very pregnant little girl from Valencia dog pound on July 26 and, soon after her arrival, she produced four male and one female puppies.

Mila is a super mum and she and her pups will be ready for their forever homes around late September. Please contact ARC if you can foster or adopt any of them. There is no adoption fee, but a donation would be much appreciated.

The shelter also has many other dogs, puppies, cats and kittens needing homes. Food and donations are also urgently needed and can be left at ARC's charity shop on Carrer Valencia 1, Jalon, between 10am and 1.30pm Monday to Saturday.

Akira dog of the week: Rocky

ROCKY has been at the shelter since early in the year.

He is small, weighs less than 10 kilos and is 20 months old.

He is an adorable boy who enjoys human company, loves his walks and playing. He is house trained and is really missing a sofa.

Rocky is castrated, vaccinated, chipped and free from all Mediterranean diseases. He is fine with female dogs.

To meet Rocky and maybe take him for a walk, phone Akira Shelter on 657 689 567 or email akirashelter@aol.com.

ADORABLE: Rocky.

Thank you Phyllis

THE Calpe and Benissa Lions have a charity shop at Calle Pintor Sorolla 15 in Calpe, and over the last few years they have raised money to help and support local people in need.

The shop could not operate without its loyal and reliable band of volunteers, all of who give at least one morning a week to sort through donations, keep the premises looking neat and welcoming, and of course help the customers.

Phyllis Cridland has been volunteering from the very first day the shop opened in 2014 and she has now decided to retire. It is people like Phyllis who make the shop a happy place to work, and she will be missed by all. The Lions wish her a relaxing future, and thank her for all her efforts over the years.

DEDICATED: Phyllis Cridland.

CONNECTING cul-de-sacs Calle Bacoreta and Calle Dentol will link the Floriana urbanisation and Residencial Varadero in La Nucia.

The new €60,000 road is being built at the request of residents in both residential areas, following a meeting with La Nucia's mayor Bernabe Cano.

"Joining the two roads will improve traffic and pedestrians," Cano said. "This project demonstrates yet again our policy of approachability, because no-one knows their urbanisation better than the residents and of what is needed."

Music and original crafts

THE Craft Fair in the Port of Javea has grown into a regular summer event.

This is the sixth year that some 20 craft people and artists sell their original work on the sea front promenade in the port. Every stall offers something different, and everything is handmade (sometimes even on the spot).

Visitors can buy wooden toys, string and glove puppets, leather bags, belts and purses, pottery, wooden sculptures, little animals and pictures made of shells, hi-tech lamps made from recycled tins, brooches of real orchids, shorts and summer dresses, crochet bags and tops.

Several stalls sell jewellery made from silver, leather, ceramics, macramé and even recycled beer cans.

For entertainment there is live music (busking!) on Mondays by the Happy Freuds and on Wednesdays there is classic jazz and soul by Montgo Music.

On Tuesday The Sunset Trio (two guitars and a violin) from northern Italy visit the fair on their busking tour through Spain, playing mainly country and blues.

Every now and then Jose the potter brings his wheel to teach young and old how to turn their own bowl or cup.

In the port itself visitors can watch the daily fish auction in the 'lonja,' see the modern church of the Virgen de Loreto, visit the many shops or relax in bars and restaurants with their terraces on the sea front.

The fair opens every evening from 7pm until midnight at the end of the Avenida Jaime I. The tourist train which runs between the port and the Arenal Beach stops every hour at the fair.

WILLING: The survey found more Russians were prepared to protest.

Poll: Willingness to rally at a high

THE amount of Russians prepared to take to the streets for economic and political protests are higher now than at any time in the last two decades, according to a survey. The independent Levada Centre's poll of 1,600 Russians found 28 per cent of respondents would be willing to personally participate in demonstrations - up from 8 per cent in March.

Band members freed

FOUR jailed members of a rock band have been released after being arrested for storming the pitch during the World Cup final last month. Pussy Riot's Nika Nikushina, Olya Pahtusova, Olya Juracheva and Petya Verzilov were freed before being arrested again, held for another day and let go, their lawyer said.

Disputed islands call

JAPAN'S Defence Minister said his country's government has called on Russia to reduce military activity in islands claimed by both countries after Moscow sent reinforcements there. Russian warplanes were deployed to the Kuril Islands, or Northern Territories to the Japanese, in February amidst Kremlin concerns over the United States' military presence in the area.

Reporter death vow

A NEWS organisation head has said he will make efforts to identify those who killed three reporters working for him in Africa.

Mikhail Khodorkovsky's comments follow the deaths of Orhan Dzhemal, Alexander Rastorguyev and Kirill Radchenko in the Central African Republic. They were reporting on Russian mercenaries, Khodorkovsky added.

Prison torture trials

SEVERAL Russian prison guards have been found guilty of ignoring the beating and torture of inmates after an abuse video sparked an outcry. The convictions, including three at a Magadan court in Russia's Far East, come as the Federal Prison Service said it would inspect prisons and probe the allegations.

Hip-hop bear ad

A VIDEO of a polar bear rapping about the public services offered by a town in the Russian Arctic has gone viral after being unearthed by social media users. The bear, who is not named, appears in front of the Norilsk coat of arms singing rehashes of Soviet and Russian songs adapted to praise street cleaning and financial management. The video is around two years old.

bet365 swoop on footy clubs

BRITISH gambling firm bet365 has been accused of 'colonising' Spain's La Liga in the wake of a dramatic sponsorship swoop.

It comes as the Stoke-on-Trent based company announced new sponsorship deals with half of the country's top flight football clubs.

The agreements run until 2020, and will see the betting brand's logo appear on the websites, coaches, facilities including stadiums, at press conferences, and social networks of Athletic de Bilbao, Betis, Celta, Eibar, Español, Getafe, Huesca, Rayo Vallecano, Valladolid and Villarreal.

Anti-corruption boss on trial

by Matt Ford

THE chief of a Spanish anti-corruption group is to stand trial for extortion.

Miguel Bernad, founder of Manos Limpias (Clean Hands), and Luis Pineda, who set up Ausbanc, a legal support service for bank clients, are also accused of fraud and membership of a criminal organisation, according to a National Court statement.

They are suspected of demanding large sums of money from companies, institutions and individuals in exchange for withdrawing criminal cases they had lodged against them.

Manos Limpias filed hundreds of lawsuits after being created by Bernad, a prominent figure within the Spanish far right.

They include the indictment of judge Baltasar Garzon, who investigated crimes against humanity by the Franco regime, and accusing Spanish King Felipe VI's younger sister Princess Cristina of tax evasion in a corruption scandal surrounding her husband's business practices.

During the high-profile trial, the defence team claimed Manos Limpias had requested a bribe be paid to drop the allegations, but her lawyers refused.

She was in 2016 cleared of all charges, but partner Inaki Urdangarin was convicted of diverting public funds for his own gain via the non-profit Noos Institute and was sentenced to five years and 10 months behind bars.

Virginia Lopez, the lawyer representing Manos Limpias in the trial, and seven other people connected to the case have also been accused of extortion in the alleged plot.

Prosecutors have reportedly requested a 118-year jail sentence for Pineda, seen as the ringleader, more than 24 years for Bernad and 12 years for Lopez.

Tax vow sparks diesel decline

SALES of diesel cars plummeted across Spain in July.

The plunge followed Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez's government pledging to slash the existing 30 per cent gap between diesel and petrol taxes. And Energy and Environment Minister Teresa Ribera recently told parliament: "Diesel's days are numbered." While new car sales saw a 19 per cent year-on-year rise over the course of the month, diesel sales dropped by 31 per cent, according to trade association ANFAC.

A scandal over emission-test cheating is thought to have triggered the backlash.

'No blank cheque' in F1 renewal deal

SPANISH HAM: Brit hero Lewis has won in Barcelona for the past two years.

LAWMAKERS in Cataluña regional say they will not be held to ransom by Formula 1 over the Spanish Grand Prix.

The current contract for the annual race at the Circuit de Barcelona-Cataluña expires next year, but renewal talks have been delayed due to political instability in the northern region. "The regional government is of course looking to extend the contract, but obviously not at just any price," said Enterprise Minister Angels Chacon during an interview. "F1 cannot be a blank cheque."

And she added the new deal must be strongly linked to the circuit's new 'viability plan,' after the track last year suffered losses of €7.4 million, much of which was linked to the Grand Prix weekend.

» BUSINESS EXTRA

Summer job surge

SUMMER job contracts have seen the number of unemployed people in Spain plummet to 3.13 million, the lowest number in nearly a decade and two million fewer than in early 2013, the National Statistics Institute has revealed.

Lift off

MADRID-BASED firm Hisdesat is negotiating with Airbus and French multinational Thales over a bid to build spy satellites for the Spanish government, with the industry ministry having already approved a €750 million loan to build them.

Girl power

BANK OF SPAIN governor Luis Maria Linde has put forward banking supervision department director Margarita Delgado to succeed deputy governor Javier Alonso, the first woman to hold such a prestigious role at the institution.

Spanish pilots to sue

SPANISH pilots' union SEPLA has revealed it is suing Irish budget airline Ryanair in a dispute over contracts.

The organisation said in a statement it has filed a lawsuit with the country's High Court, adding: "After a year of negotiations, the failure of Ryanair to recognise Sepla and apply Spanish labour legislation for the pilots who operate in Spain forces the union to take a legal path to attain this objective." SEPLA represents around 500 of 800 Ryanair pilots in Spain, and although the carrier agreed to recognise unions for the first time last December it has struggled to strike deals, leading to strikes across Europe.

Why plan for your funeral?

- It allows you to consider alternatives and make decisions concerning your funeral in your own time.
- You will feel better knowing your affairs are in order and your wishes will be carried out as planned.
- You will have peace of mind knowing your final wishes will be lifted from the shoulders of your family and friends.
- You relieve your family from the financial burden of your funeral.

Is my money safe?

Yes. When you pre-plan with Golden Leaves, the funds are placed in the Golden Leaves Trust. The trust is managed by an independent board of trustees. Their role is to ensure that funds are available to cover the cost of every pre-paid funeral whenever it occurs.

What happens if the cost of a funeral increases?

However much the actual costs of your funeral rise, you will still get exactly what you've planned and paid for.

Is there an age limit or health restrictions?

Whatever your age, there's no medical or health restrictions with a Golden Leaves Funeral Plan.

"I would recommend contacting Golden Leaves and taking out a funeral plan to anyone."

Is ruling a threat to democracy?

LEAPY LEE SAYS IT

OTHERS THINK IT

LAST week's decision to accept a sharia law ruling into a British court, is yet another highly predictable nail in the crumbling coffin of both Christianity and western culture.

The fact that it seemed quite a fair and reasonable sharia rule simply has nothing to do with it.

The high court decided that a wife, married 20 years ago in an Islamic ceremony at a Southall restaurant, should be valid and recognised because 'their vows had similar expectations of a British marriage contract.'

This highly irresponsible and frighteningly naive decision, particularly when these wholly illegal courts are springing up all over the UK, is setting such a dangerous precedent as to be almost suicidal for British democracy and laws of the land.

You can't pick and choose which laws of an alien culture you agree with and disregard those you don't find so acceptable (ala stoning to death and limb amputation!).

The point is the British high court has recognised and condoned the existence of sharia law in the United Kingdom. Mark my words, it is now only a matter of time before muslim sharia lawyers are challenging all manner of British court rulings, citing this case as an example.

Whether they are successful in their efforts is beside the point. This ruling has opened a back door to the almost laughable scenario of the laws of the UK actually being put on trial in its own courts! Once again appeasement to large numbers of people, who simply have no intention of integrating into western culture and will buck against its values and traditions at any given opportunity, has been allowed to move even further into the realms of legal acceptance. Of course, no prizes for guessing who will be paying for all the time - wasting and highly expensive court cases which will almost certainly be rearing their ugly heads in the not too distant future? Yep, you've guessed it!

Well, all I can say is on your own heads be it. Let's hope that at the next UK elections a new party emerges which has a degree of common sense and is not petrified of 'upsetting' or 'offending' someone or another. But don't hold yer breath.

I don't know about you, but I am heartily sick of all this 'touchy-feely' syndrome that seems to have crept into British sport of late. Even cricket, which used to be such a wonderful 'stiff upper lip' non-demonstrative occasion, now sees batsmen scurrying up to each other and 'fisting' after a particularly good shot.

Doubles at tennis is another example of this ridiculous habit. In fact, along with beach volleyball and badminton players, these partners still fist each other when they actually lose a point! All this, along with those utterly unacceptable orgasmic grunts of the tennis brigade and tangled pyramids of primped-up highly coffered hysterical soccer players, is turning this ol' boy back to the sport he was utterly in love with as a boy. Have a good week everyone.

Kept at arm's length

Cassandra Nash

A weekly look

- and not entirely impartial reaction - to the Spanish political scene

IT was a good-looking, low-key, high-impact gesture when the former president of the Spanish government, Mariano Rajoy, packed his bags after the vote of no confidence.

As a high-ranking civil servant, the post of Property Registrar in Santa Pola (Alicante) had been kept open for him for 28 years and was his to return to whenever he wished.

"I've come to Santa Pola to stay," he said in June, but less than two months later he announced a transfer to the Property Register in Madrid's Paseo de la Castellana, a stone's throw from the Partido Popular's party headquarters in Calle Genova.

Earlier the PP's new leader Pablo Casado drew attention to Rajoy's Santa Pola connection and commented that his wife's family always spent the summer there. No doubt he would prefer his former boss to spend the entire year there, reassuringly distant from Calle Genova. After all, Casado is an Aznar man.

Mr Bumble gets it right

THE Manada - the five men convicted of gang-raping an 18-year-old girl - are still free while appealing their sentences for what a Pamplona court classed as 'sexual abuse.'

Meanwhile, Juana Rivas risks five years in jail and loss of custody rights over her children for six years because she tried to snatch her children from her abusive Italian husband and return to Spain.

The law is the law, the judges say, and must be obeyed to the letter regardless of sentiments. All of which brings to mind - to an English-speaker at least - Mr Bumble.

Remember what he said in Oliver Twist? 'If the law supposes that, the law is an ass - an idiot.'

And before I get done for contempt of court, 'it was Dickens wot said it, not me, m'lud.'

Biding her time

SORAYA SAENZ DE SANTA-MARIA, the former vice-president and Rajoy's right hand woman, has just suffered the biggest setback of her political life.

She lost the Partido Popular primaries to Pablo Casado and now has the indignity of seeing her eternal rival, Dolores de Cospedal - who was knocked out in the first round - in a more promising position than her own. But although she has never before been so publicly tested or rejected, Saenz de Santamaria is tough enough to survive and revive, not least because Casado still has the little matter of his curiously-acquired Master's Degree in Autonomic Law to explain away.

In the meantime, the ex-vice president has declared, "I shall, as always, be loyal," which is never a good sign.

Loyalty should be a given, not a promise.

Nice little earner

CARMEN CALVO, vice-president and also Minister for Equality, would like to see the Spanish Constitution written so that it is 'bi-gender.'

This has nothing to do with sexual orientation but is a newspeak way of banishing the old grammatical preference for masculine plurals. So niños can include a niña or two, and likewise female ministers can be lurking amongst the males referred to in ministros.

It's been pointed out that this might be unfair and belittling but doctoring the constitution as Calvo wants - niñas y niños and ministras y ministros each time - will make for grim and clumsy reading, while depriving the 1978 document of most of its literary punch.

The formula is already peppering politicians' speeches and is noticeable in the written media, but possibly this is one instance where it's welcome - by the hacks who get paid by the word.

TV COUCH CRITIC

by Adam Whalley-Lewis

ANYONE who has Love Island withdrawal syndrome, yes, it is a thing apparently, might want to give Our Shirley Valentine Summer, ITV, Thursday & ITV Hub, a look.

For the rest of us, it is worth a look anyway. It is billed as a reality show where a bunch of women celebrities (a gaggle, maybe?) are transported to a remote foreign villa in search of fun, sun and maybe romance. I mean Wall, possible romance, whatever next?

Now, unlike some of the reality shows we chomp through together each week, you will actually recognise most of the celebrities. Among others, Melinda Messenger is there, Sian Lloyd (helping with the weather) and Ingrid Tarrant.

The ladies are all looking to make a fresh start or to change something. There is a marriage breakdown, a need to find love, low self-confidence and a longing to find a new hobby - thankfully these don't all relate to the same person and while I'm not entirely sure longing to take up Scottish Country Dancing quite falls into the same category as trying to get over a marriage break up, the show does seem to work.

I'm not sure what's in the Naxos water, but they seem to breed the locals handsome on the Island. A girlfriend of mine needed a lie down in a dark room after last week's Greek language trainer and fitness guru made an appearance. Sian did a bit of reflecting, my friend was hitting rewind! This is probably one for the ladies to be honest, with some friends and a massive jug of sangria. Enjoy, just don't go planning a move to Greece.

If you are in a more musical mood over the next few weeks, BBC4 is leading the Proms coverage from The Royal Albert Hall. Monday saw Ben Gernon conduct the BBC Philharmonic in a concert of Beethoven and Brahms, the composer, not of Grace Brothers fame - although Wendy Richard with a French horn might get the folk standing in the audience going. It was lovely. The second half was a world premiere. Great I thought. The music was by Tansy Davies. Don't know Tansy, stick with it.

Tansy is a contemporary composer. You just lost me. Now don't get all 'give new stuff a chance, bringing music to a new audience' on me. Tansy's work just doesn't sit well with Beethoven. Plan ahead via the BBC website for a blast of sounds from London.

Fans of The Chase, ITV, weekdays, and ITV Hub, help me with this please. Regardless of what The Chaser or Brad might say, can it ever be right to take the lower offer? Shelve Brexit, the PM needs a Chequers conference to give us a way forward on this one.

And sticking with The Governess (love her) next time The Chaser is really up against the clock in the final chase, watch how Brad noticeably speeds up asking the questions in the last 45 seconds.

My movie choice this week is Kings of Curry, BBC2, Sunday, late. Worth staying up for if you are a bit of a foodie. The plot isn't taxing. Two chefs, who are brothers, fall out, open competing restaurants on the same street, daughter of one of them attempts a reconciliation for a wedding. Simple.

Happy Viewing.

Back to nature

TROPICS: Dip-netting in Borneo.

MATT FORD, the long-serving editor of the Euro Weekly News, is set to leave the company to join a European-wide nature conservation project.

Matt, a biologist by trade, first joined EWN in April 2016 as a translator.

He soon climbed the ranks of the editorial team before being chosen to sit in the editor's chair in March last year.

Matt said he had thoroughly enjoyed working at the paper but added he could not pass up on the opportunity to return to his field and passion.

"It's been great working at EWN. I never would have imagined I would end up editing a newspaper," he said.

Matt said he first moved to Spain in 2008 and later undertook a Biology masters at the University of Barcelona. He later moved to Andalucia with his partner after she found out she was going to have a baby.

Matt soon found himself working as a reporter for EWN and following his appointment as editor he received extensive training from a former journalist.

"I was very lucky to have that. I'd written before for magazines and conservation science websites but that training turned me into a journalist.

"Once I had that grounding I enjoyed it. It gave me an insight into the journalism profession, into newspapers and into the expatriate community," he added.

Matt said highlights for him included working on a campaign for the family of a child who passed away in Almeria and following the ongoing Kirsty Maxwell case.

"I got the most of out of working on stories like that," he said.

Matt has now hung up his reporter's notepad and pen and is preparing to relocate to the German capital Berlin where he will join a PhD conservation research programme.

He will be working at the Leibniz Institute of Freshwater Ecology with leading scientists in the field of conservation biology while partially based at Cambridge University's David Attenborough building for stints with the International Union for Conservation of Nature, the global authority on the status of the natural world.

"The reason this project was created was to assess the European Union's ability to meet conservation targets set by the United Nations.

"It's been great working at EWN. I never would have imagined I would end up editing a newspaper"

"The work I and others will be doing will go on to influence government policy, in my case with fishes in rivers and fresh water areas. Those areas are arguably our most important natural resources," Matt said.

The PhD comes on the back of Matt's lifelong passion for nature.

"The chance to do this is a dream come true for me. I have always had a passion for nature and I remember drawing pictures of birds and animals from being a small child. I'm basically a nature geek.

"I care about it a lot especially because many species are dying out and largely due to humans. If we don't take genuine action soon we will be in big trouble," he said.

Matt said he would take the skills he had picked up as a journalist with him into his Biology work.

"I'll never forget the people I've worked with. EWN has prepared me to take on any challenge and I want to thank everyone for the opportunity.

"Spain is a wonderful place to live but I will be back and be sure to pick up the EWN for a read.

"Anyone can achieve these things if they believe in themselves."

No waves are too high for Euronautica Calpe

JULY and August are the high season months and this applies especially to all those water sport enthusiasts who wish to enjoy their sport and motor boats on our beautiful seas.

Euronautica has, until now, satisfied all their clients (making sure their boats are in the water on time) and have even prepared/delivered two brand new boats.

The first was a futuristic Italian model sport boat built by Invictus, for which Euronautica had to do the pre-delivery inspection and commissioning of the Volvo Penta engine as well as install all the electronic accessories.

This boat literally cuts through the water due to its original design at high speed (www.invictusyachts.com).

ment of these sloops (www.waterdream.nl).

This time he made the crossing from Calpe to Ibiza without our captain and arrived in San Antonio two-and-a-half hours later, although both the prince and his companion arrived a bit wetter than when they left. We can confirm that this was a fast crossing.

If during your holidays you wish to sail along our beautiful coastline, Euronautica offers you the possibility to rent a boat from our office in the Campomanes/Marina Greenwich yacht club in Altea.

Euronautica offers several options for rental, including a six-metre boat with a 15Hp outboard for which no licence is required. Full usage instructions are given by our staff before rental and each boat is monitored from our main office.

The option to rent with a captain is also possible so that you can enjoy a relaxed day on the water and the surroundings. (www.euronautica.com/en/boat-rental-in-costa-blanca-2/).

LETTERS FROM CANARIES

By Barbara Belt
barbarabelt@gmail.com

SINCE the 15th century, when the Spanish took the Canaries as both a practice and way station for subsequent trans-Atlantic plundering adventures, the islands have been a bridge between Africa and the Old and New Worlds.

The New World needed slaves, we're close to Africa, the rest is history.

Centuries later, oppressed Canarians migrated to the Americas. Many stayed - lots came and went. A musical melting pot is one of the more obvious results, making provincial capital, Santa Cruz de Tenerife, the perfect venue for a recent revamp of the traditional bridge role.

The recently held, second edition of the South Atlantic Performing Arts Market (Spanish initials MAPAS) morphed Santa Cruz into an international cultural showcase of some clout.

Long may it last! Think state of the art performing arts and music trade fair, add networking, training and information exchange, and you've got it.

Although performances were public, free and popular, the 56 acts from 16 countries were there to impress some 150 programmers, bookers and agents, who'd come from 40 countries to shop for festival and event acts.

Musicians had 30-minute slots to strut their stuff, while dance, theatre and circus groups' slots varied. Artistic, technical and organisation-al quality were keynotes throughout. It was an impressive event.

Cultural showcase brings in millions

CULTURAL MELTING POT: The event drew artists from 16 countries.

The pearl of waterside Santa Cruz is the Auditorio Adán Martín, designed by Santiago Calatrava. It has shimmered beautifully there in the sun since 2003. Many of the MAPAS gigs were there and evening audiences loved its outside venues.

Cava bubbling in the evening sun, waves splashing below, we were delighted by performers like Lornoar (Cameroon) - as a quick survey, to make sure it wasn't just the cava, revealed:

"Wonderful! We're so lucky to be here!,"

Dacil, 22, Tenerife.

"I'm amazed. It's like a really upmarket festival," Liam, 27, UK.

"All these marvellous performers here from all over the world! Incredible!," Carmen-Lola, 79, Tenerife. And so on.

As well as performances, artists' groups from the Canaries and 29 countries in Africa, Latin America and southern Europe met international cultural agents and programmers in pitch and networking sessions, workshops, round tables and conferences.

At the inaugural conference, Miami University's Prof. George Yudice said: "Nowadays, performing artists have to compete with increasing competition from the digital world. It's vital not only to promote good artist/venue matching, but also to help performing artists thrive in these conditions."

Performers and programmers alike agreed that MAPAS was: "A great new initiative," Katja Somrak, programmer, Slovenia.

"It's been marvellous, very worthwhile. We've had appointments with lots of bookers, met a lot of people and enjoyed Tenerife," Ana Rodríguez, Troker (Mexico)'s minder.

Code Breaker

Each number in the Code Breaker grid represents a different letter of the alphabet. In this week's puzzle, 6 represents W and 10 represents L, so fill in W every time the figure 6 appears and L every time the figure 10 appears. Now, using your knowledge of the English language, work out which letters should go in the missing squares. As you discover the letters, fill in other squares with the same number in the main grid and the control grid.

Why taxi drivers are shooting themselves in the foot

I DO understand that taxi drivers have to pay a very large amount of money in order to obtain their licences and that they see the possibility of selling them on at a profit as a retirement plan.

They obviously believe the existence of Spanish private hire company Cabify and American-owned Uber to be damaging to their livelihoods but have chosen to hurt tourists and residents by striking and blocking access to airports.

In the long run, if they offer a worse service which costs more, the cab drivers are going to lose out and will only get a percentage of the existing business from people who can't be bothered to make an advance booking.

Drivers, if you have a problem with the law, don't penalise your customers!

Guardia Civil officers save the day

BREAKING down on the N332 in 30 degree heat is never going to be fun.

Having a five-week-old baby and a two-year-old toddler in the car as well quickly turns it into a nightmare.

This is what happened this week to my daughter-in-law, who was travelling from Finestrat to Villajoyosa with my wife.

There was nowhere shaded to take the children, so the only option was to wait in the hot car, with the traffic passing at 100 km/h just inches away. The insurance company was called, and a grua and taxi promised as soon as possible, but it was still a scary situation.

Enter the heroes of the day - two Guardia Civil officers - who pulled over and took control. The blue lights on their van obviously slowed down the passing traffic and the officers took the four hot and flustered occupants into the air conditioned van.

As one officer chased up the grua and taxi on the phone, the other entertained the two-year-old (and the adults) by blowing up a latex glove and generally making him laugh. Apart from potentially preventing a crash, they made everyone feel at ease.

They did a brilliant job, so thank you to those two unnamed officers. You went beyond and above the call of duty, and we are very grateful.

in Spain which continues to fight against cruelty to animals.

At the end of August, the town of San Sebastian de los Reyes not only has its somewhat chaotic annual bull run but also has a festival in which calves aged between one and two years are slaughtered in a most inhumane manner.

This 'becerradas' as it is known occurs in a number of towns across Spain and a petition which wants to see the practice banned is hosted at www.becerradas.org.

Bad planning

I HAVE photos of the unacceptable horror and unhygienic reality of the new 'basura' recycling situation on the El Aspre/Orbeta urbanisation.

More than 18 large bins were removed, which have always been adequate even in the summer months when the urbanisation has a lot of holiday lets and summer visitors in situ. Then, with no other bins available, they began to build a small shed to house the much smaller, and fewer bins. For a few days, there were no bins on the urbanisation or in Orba at all.

Everyone in Orba had to queue (sometimes up to 90 minutes) to get a personal access code and/or the recycling bins.

The access code keyboard didn't work for a while and now the handle on the door has broken, although the lock works with the code entered. Many houses are currently empty, so they have not registered to get their access code, nor will they know the new system when they return to Spain.

The biodegradable bags split easily, and the collection for food waste is once a week. Food waste sits there rotting, and the bin lids are often left open and overflowing.

This is going to be a massive health and hygiene issue. People without access will simply dump their rubbish anywhere. There is very little parking now, whereas the bin areas before had plenty of parking, never overflowed and were completely safe from vermin and insects.

It is not acceptable given the Suma rates we all pay. Complain, and complain loudly people!

HAVE A TEA: Most effective cooling down method.

Cup winner

SCIENTISTS say a hot drink will cool you down more than an ice-cold beverage.

According to Professor Peter McNaughton, a neuroscientist at the University of Cambridge, drinking hot tea or hot water will raise core body temperature. This makes people sweat more.

Nerves in our mouths and upper digestive tract react to the heat of the drink, making the brain produce more sweat. As it evaporates, the sweat effectively cools you down.

McNaughton suggests that instead of grabbing an ice-cold drink on a hot day, he recommends 'a good cup of hot tea,' because it doesn't have other effects - like huge levels of caffeine.

GREY hair comes with maturity and wisdom. However it can happen early in life too.

Hair dyes can cover the grey hair, however they contain harmful elements which can cause hair loss or even affect health.

Luckily, there are natural ingredients which work to reduce or reverse the growth of grey hair and create shades of auburn, red, mahogany, black and blonde.

Research shows that genetics is the major cause of grey hair. Other causes include stress, poor nutrition and vitamin intake, as well as continuous lack of sleep.

Grey matter

reducing the grey hair. Onions are rich in the antioxidant enzyme catalase, which restores the hair's natural colour.

The phytonutrients in onion, along with vitamin C, folic acid and copper, all help in delaying the greys. Eating onion is a way to colour reverse. Applying onion juice onto the scalp reduces the build-up of hydrogen peroxide and reverses grey hair. It even helps with hair loss and makes the hair grow faster, softer and shinier.

Coconut oil is good for hair conditioning and growth, and works as an anti-dandruff treatment and prevents growth of grey hair.

Henna is a natural alternative to hair dyes. It gives hair a warm red-brown colour and when mixed with other herbs including indigo, coffee or clove it creates various shades. Henna is also conditioning which adds shine.

Rosemary, as well as adding flavour into foods, works as a hair colourant and slows appearance of grey hair. It also revitalises hair, leaving it shiny and soft.

WHEN it comes to looking good and feeling good it is wise to pay attention to the old saying 'have you had your beauty sleep?'

The secret to well-being can involve many factors including keeping fit, eating the right diet and taking care to select the right beauty products.

A-list stars like Jennifer Lopez and Mariah Carey - renowned for looking years younger than their real age - have long advocated a decent night's sleep as their number one beauty tip and a survey by UK bed company Sealy seems to back them up.

The study aimed to find out more about the UK's sleeping habits and whether there really is a link between a good night's sleep and an improved physical appearance.

The research revealed that more than half of people (60 per cent) believe that the quality of sleep they get has a positive effect on their physical appearance, with the majority of those who enjoy good quality sleep claiming to have experienced a number of physical benefits including brighter eyes (42 per cent), a better complexion (21 per cent) and clearer skin (20 per cent).

Food for thought

MANY of the best tasting foods are the worst, because they are artificially constructed flavours and not like those found naturally.

Research has found that eating red or processed meat every day increases the risk of cancer by 22 per cent.

Consuming alcohol may damage DNA, which may lead to cancer. Research has found the more alcohol you drink, the higher risks for developing certain cancers which include head and neck, liver, mouth, breast and colorectal cancers.

Alcohol consumption is thought to be the second leading cause of cancer worldwide after smoking.

Eating a lot of red meat such as beef, veal or lamb is linked to colorectal, pancreatic and prostate cancer.

Popcorn is a healthy snack, however the cooking of it makes it extremely unhealthy. Microwave bags are lined with a chemical called perfluorooctanoic acid (PFOA). Studies show that consuming PFOA can cause cancers of the kidney, bladder, liver and pancreas.

Tinned foods are linked to cancer because almost all aluminium cans are lined with cancer-causing bisphenol-A (BPA). High acidity foods, including canned tomatoes, are dangerous to eat out of a can.

Classical folk music in the moonlight

THERE are two concerts remaining in the series of evening concerts organised by the Fundación Cultural ITHACA, Altea.

Starting at 8.30pm on Sunday, Carlos López Lagarza, baritone and Vicent Ballester, guitar will be interpreting works by Spanish classical guitarist Sor and composer Albéniz as well as Argentine folk artists Guastavino, Bielsa and Atahualpa Yupanki.

The final concert on Sunday August 19 welcomes Japanese visitors

Yoko Kumazawa playing violin and Taro Kishimoto on flute and bouzouki with their own interpretations of classic folk music from around the world.

Entry is by donation of €15 (on a first come, first served basis) which includes a variety of snacks and drinks and access to an exhibition of paintings.

The Fundación Cultural ITHACA is situated at Partida Monte Molar 78 (La Olla) and is the small road in front of the pharmacy at the N-332 Altea-Calpe.

For information call 965 842 350.

Everyone loves a beach party

NEXT weekend sees the return of the Fiestas de l'Albir which will run from Friday August 17 to Sunday August 19.

Arranged under the auspices of the l'Alfàs del Pi in conjunction with the Association of Penyes Santíssim Crist of Bon Encert, an organisation that includes a total of 41 clubs and has approximately 750 members, this promises to be a full on event.

The l'Albir fiesta will be held in Eucalyptus Park and, among the scheduled events, yet again the water events for children which take place on Saturday and Sunday stand out.

Friday will be the day of the proclamation of the event and that night there will be a folk festival presented by the Chicos de Ciudad orchestra and the party will continue with the ambient sounds of Iván DeeJay.

On Saturday, the events will take place in different locations to make sure that there is plenty to see and do.

There will be a petanque championship at the Retirement and Pensioners Club of l'Albir, aquatic attractions for the youngsters on Avenida Óscar Esplá, a Flower Power party at the Eucalyptus Park, fireworks developed by the Ricasa pyrotechnics at the l'Albir market car park, the Gamma Live orchestra and, finally a foam party with DJ

Jes Set in the Eucalyptus park.

On Sunday, the last day of festivities, in addition to the water attractions for children, there will be a lively evening for the Benidorm Tropical charanga and a series of games.

As in previous years, a free bus service is available to the public from 12.30am until 4.30am with stops at the Casa de Cultura and the Eucalyptus Park.

by Andrew Harding

THIS week I will discuss vitamin B complex. It is complex because there are more than one, but less than 12, which is the largest numeral ascribed to a B vitamin.

The first B vitamin to be discovered was called 'water-soluble B.' That meant that it was only the second vitamin ever identified (the first was fat-soluble A). Riboflavin was discovered next, so water-soluble B became B1, and riboflavin became B2. The system began to get confusing in 1926, when researchers realised that vitamin B1, was actually two vitamins, thiamine and niacin. Thiamine kept the B1 name. B2 was already taken, so Niacin became B3.

As vitamin research continued, scientists found a number of substances they thought at first were new B vitamins. Some, however, turned out to be the same B's that had already been discovered, while others turned out not to be vitamins at all. These phantom B's are the missing numbers. To avoid confusion, scientists now prefer to use the B vitamin names instead of the numbers. There are no vitamins 4, 8, 10 and 11. I will split the B vitamins into four parts; one this week and the rest over the

Thiamine (vitamin B1) helps to break down and release energy from food and is essential for a healthy nervous system. Good sources include: peas, fresh and dried fruit, eggs, wholegrain breads, some fortified breakfast cereals and liver. Symptoms of deficiency include: loss of appetite, fatigue, irritability, tingling in the arms and the legs as a result of nerve damage (this is one of the earliest symptoms displayed), blurred vision and delirium.

Riboflavin (vitamin B2) helps to keep skin, eyes and the nervous system healthy and allows the body to release energy from food. Good sources of riboflavin include: milk, eggs, fortified breakfast cereals and rice. Ultraviolet light can destroy riboflavin, so ideally these foods should be kept out of direct sunlight. Symptoms of deficiency include: weakness or fatigue, mood change, a sore throat is usually the first presenting system, skin cracking, dermatitis and anaemia.

• This week's recipe:

Italian Stewed Beef

Serves 4

1 kg stewing beef, cubed
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, skinned and chopped
6 whole garlic cloves, skinned and chopped

500 ml red wine

4 whole bay leaves

1 tablespoon Italian dried herbs

2 whole beef stock cubes, crumbled

1. Place beef with the oil in a frying pan and fry to seal.

2. Add the onion, garlic and celery and continue to fry for another two or three minutes.

3. Add the red wine and simmer until the smell of alcohol has disappeared.

4. Pour into a slow cooker set on high and add the remaining ingredients.

5. Allow to cook for a minimum of three hours, ideally four to five.

6. Serve with ribbon pasta (tagliatelle, pappardelle, fettuccine, etc).

Hint: If you don't have a slow cooker, place in a lidded-casserole dish in the oven at 170 Celsius (Conventional)/ 160 Celsius (Fan).

Stars shine in Benidorm for charity

ADD Sunday September 23 to your diary as that is the night when a spectacular charity concert will be presented at the Benidorm Palace.

This is a variety show which sees 13 different acts performing to raise money for The Royal British Legion (TRBL) and cancer charity AECC supported by the Pink Ladies.

Whilst every act will entertain, the three main stars of this show will be 72-year-old comic James Mulgrew, better known as Jimmy Cricket who is a regular visitor to Costa Blanca and will be recognised for his wellington boots marked L and R and his clean and gentle act.

Singer Jake Quickenden appeared on two editions of the X Factor, was runner up in I'm a Celebrity, won Dancing on Ice and for several years was a semi-professional footballer so can turn his hands (or feet) to many different things.

Headline act is former prison officer Sam Bailey who won X Factor in 2013 and went on to have a No 1 single and album in the UK. Since then, she has appeared in the musicals Chicago and Fat Friends and is due to play the Vampire Queen in the touring cast of Vampires Rock.

Although not organised directly by the Benidorm Palace, reservations for the show can be made by calling their box office number 965 851 660 or online.

General admission costs €25 (chicken or fish and chips available at an additional €8) but a limited number of VIP tickets which ensure best view and include food and entry to the after show party with DJ Mike Allen can be purchased at €50.

Doors open at 7pm and the show which also recalls the centenary of the end of the First World War starts at 8pm and don't forget all profits will be shared between the two charities.

SAM BAILEY: An advance shot as the Vampire Queen.

UB40 featuring Ali, Astro and Micky - last call

IF you want to enjoy the official end of the heatwave and enjoy the summer sounds of reggae crossover then don't forget that UB40 hits will be played live in Torrevieja next Wednesday.

The face and voice of the band, Ali Campbell has been in a long term dispute with his two brothers Duncan and Robin over the use of the name UB40 which is why his current band is touring as UB40 featuring Ali, Astro and Mickey.

According to the founder member who was featured in no less than 50 hits before he left the band a decade ago, this is the real sound of UB40 and promises a great evening for anyone who can make it to Torrevieja.

It may be a journey for those living in the north of Costa Blanca but with just two other Spanish concerts, in Estepona and Mallorca, this could well be a gig not to miss.

Tickets cost from €55 and can be obtained from the usual ticket websites.

Views of a Grumpy Old Man

READ an interesting item this week that there is just one Blockbuster video store left in the world. In their prime they had 9,000 stores worldwide and employed over 84,000 employees. The amazing thing is that it took about 25 years from start to finish and what is even more amazing is that most 20 year olds don't even know what a video is.

They have never had the fun of going into a video store and renting a great movie. Or of making sure you booked it for whatever night you wanted to see it or going round the shop picking up the boxes and finding a night's entertainment. Video was a revolution.

Everything since is evolution and it was the pure greed of the Hollywood Studios that killed video. They hated the fact that individuals were, in their opinion, earning too much money out of their product. So they put obstacle after obstacle in the way to try and control the business. They used copywrite laws in the end to stop the renting out of VHS and then DVD. They wanted all the control.

The dream was that people would be able to download their movies directly from the studio and cut out the middle man. Well, they finally won, or thought they had. All the video stores went out of business and everybody started downloading movies. But instead of the studios getting paid for every movie watched, the punters found a way of by passing the system and are downloading them for free. Is it legal? No, it isn't. Can they stop it?

No, but it was their greed that caused it. I sold my video stores in 2001 as I just couldn't fight with the film companies any more. It was unbelievable how much the studios hated video and DVD even though, in its heyday, it represented 57 per cent of all returns of a movie. Greed and power - that's the problem.

I think the same will happen with Facebook. I reckon in a few years that will disappear too. Kids are already using other forms of social media. They don't want to be bombarded with adverts and stuff. Google, Amazon, Facebook, Apple, Microsoft and a few others want to control our lives. What we watch, what news we are fed and what we buy.

I think people will get wise eventually and do something about it. The biggest taxi company in the world doesn't own one taxi. The biggest food takeaway company doesn't own a burger van never mind a restaurant. I'm getting fed up with it all. I don't know about you but in my own grumpy way I'll try and fight it.

Disney hotels are a child's dream

BAHIA PRINCIPE HOTELS AND RESORTS, a leading all-inclusive resort chain with properties in Spain, the Caribbean and Mexico, is preparing to debut its newest property - Fantasia Bahia Principe Tenerife.

Nearly two years after the opening of the successful Luxury Bahia Principe Fantasia in Punta Cana, in the Dominican Republic, the property will be the second Fantasia-class hotel, both offering a Disney-like setting.

Fantasia Bahia Principe is a family-friendly concept which boasts a range of accommodation, activities and dining options, catering to guests of all ages.

The Tenerife hotel will have 370 rooms, four restaurants, six bars and will maintain the company's leading standards in multi-generational vacations.

A massive fairytale castle will be its centre point (as with the Punta Cana), and the hotel will be home to spectacular nightly light shows including a video mapping story of Tenerife, its characteristics and history.

DISNEY WORLD: Children will love the fairytale-inspired architecture.

Children can enjoy a variety of facilities including two large swimming pools, waterparks, children's clubs and even spas just for children.

The teens' club, known as 'The Loft,' is equipped with a gym, cinema, dance floor with DJ, video consoles and a billiard table.

A secluded sanctuary

MOST people find out about La Donaire hotel, tucked away in the mountains of Andalucia, by word of mouth.

This old Spanish cortijo (farmhouse) holds just nine bedrooms, a few yurts, a sybaritic spa and two spring-water-fed pools.

It has been operating for the past two years as an eco-friendly farm with rooms, part of a growing trend of boutique agroturismos.

This is a form of agricultural hospitality which celebrates farm-to-table food, a laid-back atmosphere and, above all, authenticity.

It is popular in places such as rural Italy and Ibiza, but it is the first hospitality experience of its kind in Andalucia. La Donaire is located in the middle of the dramatic Sierra de Grazalema Natural Park, framed by craggy-faced mountains and undulating green farmlands.

A rustic feel pervades across the house, with worn brown leather seats, wreaths of dried flowers, trough-like sinks and beamed ceilings.

Four-poster beds sit next to Maria Vargas paintings and copper bathtubs, and a 70's theme pervades the living room with low sofas, shaggy rugs and chrome lamps.

However, the real highlights of the property are the huge picture windows with stunning views, reminding guests exactly where they are.

La Donaire's biodynamic farm runs a 'soil school,' teaching local farmers better practices through workshops by experts in permaculture.

All the food provided is either grown on the farm or sourced from a local producer, and it is delicious. The fact that all visitors come away from La Donaire singing its praises means that its 'heard-it-through-the-grapevine' nature could soon be a thing of the past.

Room Mate hotels expand empire

SPAIN-BASED Room Mate hotels is on track to double its portfolio from 1,522 guestrooms to more than 3,052 by 2019.

The hotel chain has already branched out to several new destinations recently, including San Sebastian, Rome, Paris, Mallorca and Lisbon.

Room Mate hotels converted a 19th century spice warehouse in the city's port into the 217-room hotel, which also shares the space with the market Foodhallen.

Italian architect Teresa Sapey designed the property and said:

"We have kept the building's naval identity, but we also wanted to take Spain's sun, flavour and colour to northern Europe."

The group also recently added the new Room Mate Gorka in Spain to its portfolio.

The hotel is located in Plaza Guipuzcoa, San Sebastian, near to the beach of La Concha.

In 2018 the Room Mate Group brand was formed, combining the hotel division, tourist apartments and the consultancy X-Perience.

Breaking Views

Nora is the author of popular psychological suspense and crime thrillers and a freelance journalist. To comment on any of the issues raised in her column, go to www.euroweeklynnews.com/3.0.15/nora-johnson

OPEN the garden shed, swat the cobwebs from the deckchairs and prepare the knotted handkerchiefs: phew, it's summer - and sizzling! (However, I'm never quite sure if the knotted handkerchief should be flat on my head or placed at a natty, happy-go-lucky angle. Anyone happen to know?)

Seriously, though, the rules for keeping cool are simple enough: 1. Wear a hat; 2. Apply sunscreen; 3. Drink plenty of water (you know, the stuff from the tap) throughout the day; 4. Consider wearing loose, long-sleeved cotton clothes.

When I did a straw poll among my girlfriends (only the finest of scientific and journalistic methods for this column, folks) about summer etiquette, the thing that really irritates them is men coming into supermarkets shirtless - but marginally better than those who walk around scoffing the food whilst shopping before they've paid for it, or those who carry folded bikes inside the supermarket with them.

The heat is on: how to avoid havoc on the hottest days

FEELING HOT, HOT, HOT:

'Traditionally-built' (read: overweight) women in 'absurd, flimsy sunsuits' designed for three-year-olds.

But let's return to those guys walking around topless, showing what they've got (or not). What they do/don't have is usually a six-pack, multiple tattoos and/or a fat belly. What a sight! But not as startling as those doing their shopping sporting 'budgie smugglers' - the butt of jokes everywhere (pun intended)!

Which reminds me of the story of one poor guy who years ago was strong-armed into playing the organ in a nearby church - the Episcopalian Church of Scotland.

At the start of the service there was a procession of office-holders all carrying banners who were played into the church with the minister at their head. As one of the office-holders parked his banner and took his official seat in front of the organ he glanced over at the newly-deputising organ-player and yelled out: "They tell me you have the biggest organ in the church."

Oddly this had such a paralysing effect on the poor guy that, if said anywhere else, would have had him rolling in the, err, aisles ...

LEGALLY SPEAKING

Can they use spreadsheets?

Q. I was treasurer of a registered society for many years, during which time I followed the instructions of a Spanish lawyer for the presentation of the accounts. Our president has now urged a more modern approach and the new treasurer proposes to use spreadsheets instead of the established style which I used, along with explanatory notes.

Also, the minutes of the recent AGM have been sent to committee members for approval in a September meeting. The minutes, however, give no financial information. Surely the minutes have to include financial information at the end of the year? Are spreadsheets recognised by Spanish society laws?

MH (Costa del Sol)

A. Article 14 of Spain's law of associations says only that they must present accounts that give a faithful picture of the association's economic activities. The spreadsheet containing all details with double entries is considered the most complete form to present this.

Standardly, the minutes and the financial report are two separate documents. They both need the approval of the AGM, especially regarding next year's budget.

TECH FOR THE TIMID

A COLLEAGUE says he has to buy a new tablet because the old one's full.

Really? Let's see: with a memory card it can hold 144 GB of data. At a rough calculation that would hold every word of, say, the Bible (4.13 MB in its free download from Project Gutenberg), more than 35,000 times with room left over for a few cat videos.

And it's full?

Call me old-fashioned but doesn't it make more sense to empty a bucket when it's brimming instead of buying a new bucket?

Unlike breaking-up in the 1975 pop song, cleaning up is not so hard to do. Or as the Everly Brothers might have put it: 'All I have to do is cle-ee-ee-ee-een, clean clean cle-ee-een.'

The principle's roughly the same for a tablet or a smartphone. First, zap all the obvious junk you've acquired (here's looking at your animal clips and other YouTube funnies).

Clean up your act

Terence Kennedy gets out the broom for a digital sweep

CLEAN SWEEP: Out with the digital dross.

Don't know how to find them? If your device hasn't got a File Manager just download one, some are even called that. Then trawl the folders it reveals and merrily delete where needed. Or to be pedantic: not needed.

Purge unwanted attachments from your emails, then exorcise all the excess pix from WhatsApp and the downloaded music and videos you once thought you couldn't live without but have done ever since.

You can even zap your photos because if your device has behaved as originally configured they'll all be backed up in the cloud anyhow.

Uninstall apps you absolutely don't use and most likely never will - though quite a few will dig their heels in because Mr Google or Mr Apple decided you may not do without them.

Then it's time to get down and dirty. To terminate the stragglers with extreme prejudice as the CIA might say, download a cleaner-upper like the free 'Files Go' for Android, launch it and let it lead you by the hand.

Bingo: space available for several thousand more Bibles or one Spanish Labour Law. Works every time, though in rare cases it can go wrong and this column takes no responsibility blah blah ...

And if it does, or you'd simply prefer to have your device back the way it was when you took it out of the box? Easy-peasy.

Somewhere in the Settings you'll find 'backup and reset' or similar. Its scorched-earth option is called 'factory reset.'

Deep breath, click, wait, breathe. Then welcome to your shiny 'new' toy, and happy re-installing and fiddling.

Oh, what, you forgot to write down all your passwords and save your vital documents before you wiped it clean? Oops.

Factory reset

FACTORY resets are a fail-safe option on plenty of gadgets these days and all you may need is a pin.

Look hard at simpler devices to find a pinhole. Poke your pin in there as instructed in the manual or online, and the device will reset.

A factory reset is absolutely the way to go if passing on a device which contains any personal data; it's almost the only sure-fire way to remove your traces.

Alas, you can't poke a pin at a computer to work that magic. Do your research, choose the reinstall option, enjoy a new and unsullied version of your operating system - and then schedule lots (and lots) of midnight oil to get it all back the way you want it.

Planning gardens to survive the summer

DICK HANDSCOMBE

I AM now enjoying my 30th summer in Spain without expensive air conditioning and with fresh ecological salad vegetables daily from the garden.

The solution was to: live in an inland valley that had a breeze most days; retain and train natural trees for maximum shade in the summer and maximum sun in the winter; keep windows and shutters closed in the summer until shaded after 5pm and open windows and shutters 9am to 5pm in the winter; recognise that only early and late sun is required for salad vegetables but the roots need to be kept constantly damp - to help this a five kilo box of handy TerraCottem has been kept and used whenever planting new plants.

That is just a brain dump of things that come to mind first. This list is increased and expanded on to several hundred in the booklet How to Use Less Water in your Garden - a practical guide to water-wise Mediterranean-

This is available inexpensively from Amazon in English and Spanish.

Luckily many plants have a defence mechanism when the weather is very hot and slow down their activity with growth and flowering being reduced, except for true tropical and semi-tropical flowering plants and trees.

But even then most plants welcome shelter from the hottest suns in semi-or full shade for at least part of the day. Likewise so do humans, pets, insects and garden wildlife such as geckoes and frogs.

When we purchased our house we kept old trees and planted more, we maximised the use of the natural shade for part of the day on the north side and for much of the day on the western side. Likewise we now take maximum advantage of large trees on the eastern southern and western boundaries, trailing climbers over pergolas or wires from trees to the house wall. With very few spots in the garden that are not in at least dappled shade for at least part of the day there is always somewhere to rest, read or work in the shade and one can stroll the entire perimeter of the plot largely in the shade.

Thinking about planting-up some areas of the garden, especially those which you see when resting or taking a siesta, with cooling plantings that are predominantly white, grey, blue and mauve as suggested in chapter 2.6 in 'Your Garden in Spain - from planning to planting and maintenance.' This was chapter 4.17 in the earlier version of the book.

Possible plants include white and blue agapanthus, mauve tulbaghias, white flowering petunias, begonias, solanum, jasmine and roses, the grey foliage of echiums, lavenders, some gazanias and sages.

Likewise white walls, white plant pots, rocks in rockeries, areas of white stone chippings, light versus dark coloured paths and terraces and whitewashed trunks of citrus trees - which also helps to prevent them from splitting in the sun - can help cool down the garden.

Lastly but not least, the sight and sound of water can be stimulating, soothing and cooling. A fountain can be purchased and immediately installed, but a pond with a fountain or cascading waterfall is a project for the winter - to be ready for next year.

How to design a home

DECORATING a house can be difficult, but here are some tips on how to do it well, regardless of its size.

Establishing a colour scheme is the first step towards the perfect home. Choosing favourite colours and matching various items really makes it work. Orange and blue, purple and pink, yellow and lime green or grey, complemented by any colour, are good combinations.

Painting the walls different colours - for example, a dark orange and a light orange - will make the room look brighter and bigger.

Another way to warm a room up is with mirrors. A pattern of mirrors will make it look personal and enlarge the space. Hand-made home decor is also a good addition to any home.

How to keep your garden hydrated

WITH the arrival in the hot summer months of temperatures of up to 40 Celcius, keeping your garden maintained is extremely difficult.

Here are some tips on how to keep your garden hydrated, even in the hottest summer months.

Container gardens and potted plants will suffer most during the heat. Potted plants in direct sunlight may need to be watered twice a day.

However here are some tips on how to deal with it without having worry about gardening every day:

Moving plants to shady areas during the heat will prevent them from drying out too quickly.

Putting potted plants in areas near sprinklers so no watering is required is a good option.

Drip-irrigation is also an idea for plotted plants - these systems ensure plants get watered constantly.

If you have a vegetable garden it is important to water it consistently. Inconsistent watering can cause vegetables like root crops and tomatoes to crack, and leafy crops to bolt.

When vegetable plants are dehydrated, the stress can cause the plant to stop flowering or even drop its fruits and flowers.

Sprinklers set on timers are the best option to maintain your vegetable garden with little maintenance needed.

David
THE Dogman

columnists@ewnmediagroup.com

TAKE special care of your dog in hot summer months - dogs have inefficient cooling systems compared to humans. The sweat glands are in the tongue and paw pads, the primary method of sweating being the obvious one of panting.

If a muzzle or a respiratory blockage interferes with this ability to pant, a dog may overheat quickly. Obese dogs suffer most. Never exercise a dog in the heat of the day and keep its weight under control. Make sure there is plenty of shade and water.

Temperatures of more than 40°C can result in rapid panting, bright red gums, tongue and other mucus membranes, vomiting, watery and bloody diarrhoea and staggering. Thick saliva is also a sign of an impending heat stroke. If a dog is not treated immediately it is possible that coma, respiratory collapse and death can result.

If there are signs of heat stroke, cool the dog off by submerging it in tepid water before taking it to a vet. Flap a towel to fan the dog and allow gradual cooling.

Cooling a dog that is in shock too fast with cold water can cause further problems, even hypothermia. Certainly do not use ice water for this could result in a narrowing of the arteries to the skin, meaning the dog will retain the heat longer.

The dangers of sunstroke

WARNING SIGNS: Dogs can overheat quickly.

Do not leave dogs in cars even with the windows down, and do not allow them to travel with their heads out of the car windows. If you see a dog in an unattended car in hot weather for more than five minutes call the police. Keep water in the boot of the car and out of the sun, dogs do not like warm or hot water.

Hot pavements, tarmac and sand on a beach can burn paws. Jogging with your dog running behind is also unwise, as is making your dog run behind a car.

Remember young or small dogs take 10 steps to our one and young dogs need most of their energy for growing.

Don't clip long-haired dogs too short otherwise there is the danger of the skin being sun burnt, their coats are for protection against cold weather and the sun.

It is not natural for dogs that have been bred for cold climates, such as Huskies and Ankitas, to be taken to warm climates for then behavioural and health problems will occur.

Brexistential crisis?

THE claim: If Brexit negotiations fail it will make it harder to travel with pets from the UK to the EU. Reality check verdict: If there is no deal then it will indeed be harder to take pets to the EU. The pet passport scheme includes countries that are not EU members, but a deal would need to be done.

EU negotiator Michel Barnier has warned French newspaper Le Journal du Dimanche of some of the consequences of the UK leaving the EU without a deal.

Among those, he spoke about 'the ability ... of dogs and cats to cross the Channel.'

At the moment you can take your pet dog, cat, or indeed ferret, from the UK to the EU and back again without quarantine provided that certain conditions are met, such as having a pet passport and your pet being microchipped.

Pet passports are issued by EU countries and a short list of other countries such as Greenland, Iceland and Switzerland.

The UK could be added to this list, but clearly agreements would be needed to make that happen - it would not be automatic. At 11pm on March 29, 2019, the United Kingdom will officially leave the European Union or at least it will begin a 21-month transition period aimed at smoothing the way toward post-Brexit relations. But for worried observers of the process that was set into motion on June 23, 2016, when the leave vote was narrowly victorious in a referendum, the process has been anything but smooth until now.

I will keep you informed ...

Full Time Professional Estate Agent & Property Consultant

Wincham International is a Spanish Estate Agent operating throughout Spain.

We are currently looking to recruit a full time professional sales consultant to assist us in providing clients with estate agent services relating to their Spanish property located on the Costa Blanca North.

The ideal candidate will have experience of working in a sales environment, be tenacious and self-motivated and be confident in working in a target driven environment. They must also be articulate, numerate, computer literate and have excellent client focus.

Suitable applicants must have sales experience within an estate agency or property sales.

The role will be based at our Wincham Calpe office and include developing sales from qualified leads, improving conversion rates and providing consultancy and legal services to clients and their Spanish property purchase or sale.

The Wincham Calpe office operates as a local estate agent so there is the requirement to list property for our sellers within the marketing campaigns we run, and also show potential buyers the properties for sale.

The successful sales candidate will have a proven track record and an outgoing personality, must speak and write excellent English and Spanish as you will be dealing with both British and Spanish owned property transactions. In addition, another language eg French, Dutch or Russian would be an advantage.

Initial and ongoing training will be provided, a good basic salary plus uncapped commission/bonus scheme is also in place for the right candidate. The working week required is 40 hours Monday-Friday. The annual salary will be depending on experience.

Please apply in writing to the Director, Mark Roach at Wincham International Limited.

MOTORING FACT

Ford offered the first ever intermittent wind shield wipers as an option on the company's Mercury line, beginning with the 1969 models.

Volkswagen Touareg has star power

WITH its starship looks and when fully kitted out with Volkswagen's Innovision Cockpit, the new Touareg is unlike anything else currently on sale.

It was always going to need to make a statement to grab the attention of buyers, its predecessor has been under siege from rivals for 15 years.

This new model shares its underpinnings with the Audi Q7, Bentley Bentayga and Lamborghini Urus, among others.

Longer and wider than before, albeit a fraction lower, this new Touareg looks like a beast on the road, with a grille that appears to stretch across its entire front.

Despite its size, the Touareg remains a five-seater, meaning it lacks the versatility of a Q7 or Volvo XC90.

However, the five seats you do get are generously proportioned, with easily enough room for three adults to sit across the back,

Credit: Grzegorz Czapski/Shutterstock

As with the smaller Tiguan, these rear seats slide fore and aft, and have adjustable backrests, all allowing you to trade some rear legroom for additional boot space.

The quality of the interior surpasses any other VW to date - with soft, smooth leather and absurdly comfortable seats.

At night the ambient lighting emits a gentle glow, and that the Touareg does all of this without any of the bling so often associated with these enormous SUVs is to VW's credit.

The 12-inch digital dials can display a full satnav map as well as the usual trip computer and audio controls, leading to an almost endless range of possible configurations.

Despite all the usual range of driving modes, the Touareg is at its best if you just leave everything in the default, normal setting.

It may be a two-ton SUV but if you put your foot down the 282bhp Touareg really goes, and the engine is well matched to the gearbox.

Volkswagen thinks it's got a class leader in its hands and if you value comfort and technology over a sporty drive or a posh logo, you may well agree.

LOOKING SPRITE: Iconic 2 GTO first registered to Austin Healey.

A licence to sell

THE '2 GTO' licence plate could potentially be the most expensive ever to be sold in the UK. The registration plate could end up on a Ferrari 250 GTO, the most expensive car ever sold.

Once licensed to an Austin Healey 'Frogeye' Sprite, the '2 GTO' plate has belonged to the same owner since 1970. The iconic number plate has now been put up for auction with an official estimate of €225,000 to €337,000, however it may fetch much more.

Now retired, the owner prefers to remain anonymous but admits that the coveted plate has previously been used on ordinary, run of the mill cars.

At the moment the most expensive plate ever sold in the UK is '25 O,' registered to a €11.25 million Ferrari 250 GT SWB in 2014, costing €656,000.

The world's most expensive classic car to date is a 1963 model sold for €58 million last month.

Currently on sale for an asking price of €16million is the 'F1' registration plate, licensed to a 2013 Bugatti Veyron, having been bought for €422,000 from Essex Council in 2008.

Harley reinvents itself

MOTORBIKE makers Harley Davidson are reportedly hoping to broaden their appeal with a series of new models including a new electric bike.

The models, which include the LiveWire bike, are set for release in 2019. They come as the company has faced declining US sales in recent years.

Matt Levatich, the company's CEO, said Harley Davidson wanted to inspire future riders with the new models.

"We want to inspire those who haven't yet even thought about the thrill of riding, alongside our existing loyal riders, with the next revolution of two-wheeled freedom," he said.

Harley Davidson, whose motorbikes are known for their roaring, rumbling engines, said it plans to introduce the electric LiveWire bike to make riding easier. It is set to feature no clutch and no gears.

The firm said it planned to release 100 new motorcycles over the next 10 years and it wanted to win over two million new riders to combat falling sales.

The LiveWire will be followed by 'twist and go' electric two-wheelers over the next few years which will be lighter and smaller.

The company is set to continue making big bikes and its new models will include a more technology-advanced touring and cruiser motorcycle.

England bowl India over

ENGLAND'S cricket team held their nerve to complete a tense 31 run victory over India on an enthralling fourth morning of the first Test at Edgbaston.

India - resuming on 110-5 in pursuit of 194 - were bowled out for 162 as tension mounted among an increasingly raucous crowd.

In only his second Test, Sam Curran's performance stood out, with his bowling on the second day and batting on the third dragging England back into the game and setting the stage for a thrilling finish.

The all-rounder sealed victory by having Hardik Pandya caught at first slip to finish with 4-40.

Stokes bowled with aggression and shrewdness but will miss the second test at Lord's due to his court case for alleged affray.

While India came up short, their performance was a far cry from their dismal tour four years ago and bodes well for the remainder of what promises to be a hotly contested five-Test series.

England captain Joe Root said:

"It was a fantastic team performance with ups and downs, but credit has to go to the bowlers from both teams."

India captain Virat Kohli said his first century in England "does not matter" after his side's narrow defeat.

Hall claims Women's Open

ENGLAND'S Georgia Hall hopes she can encourage more young girls to take up golf after winning the Women's British Open at Royal Lytham & St Annes.

The 22-year-old is only the third British winner since the event became a major championship in 2001.

Hall, who won by two shots at 17 under par, also hopes to help attract new sponsors to the Ladies European Tour.

"I want to be a good role model for young girls in Britain and hopefully I can encourage a lot of them to take up the game," she said.

Victory meant the 2013 British ladies' amateur champion emulated compatriot Karen Stupples and Scot Catriona Matthew, the other two British winners since this event became a major.

It also secured the Bournemouth-based golfer a €429,000 prize.

, with Hall admitting she had previously missed majors because of the cost.

Trailing Pornanong Phatlum by a shot overnight, Hall moved clear of the Thai on Sunday with two holes remaining, and held her nerve on the 18th to secure victory.

Hall also says she is just as superstitious as her father and caddie, Wayne, who refused to change his socks for four days.

"I am quite superstitious as well, I have to touch every golf club before I tee off to make sure there are 14," she added.

Aguero gives Chelsea the Blues

SERGIO AGUERO scored both Manchester City's goals as the Premier League champions beat Chelsea to win the Community Shield on a sweltering day at Wembley.

Aguero's first - his 200th goal for the club - came after 13 minutes, when he collected the ball on the edge of the area after Phil Foden surged forward, and fired into the bottom corner.

HEAR TO STAY: Aguero's first goal was his 200th for City.

could be put down to the heat, which made it difficult for both sides to sustain any sort of tempo.

Players were allowed water breaks during the game and some substitutes had wet towels over their heads.

The Blues missed the creativity of Eden Hazard, but City were also without Kevin de Bruyne, Raheem Sterling and David Silva.

City's controlled performance secured their third piece of silverware in the past six months, and manager Pep Guardiola has emphasised that they are hungry for more.

Chelsea will face Huddersfield on Saturday, while City begin the defence of their Premier League crown at Arsenal on Sunday.

Peaty makes waves again

GREAT BRITAIN'S Adam Peaty broke his own 100m breaststroke World record to retain his European title in Glasgow.

The 23-year-old Olympic and World Champion finished in 57 seconds - 0.13 seconds quicker than his previous best time - as teammate James Wilby grabbed silver following a late surge.

Peaty took a huge lead on the first 50m before pulling away further to win by 1.54secs from fellow Englishman Wilby.

"I can't believe I beat what I did at the Olympics," said Peaty.

"I was in perfect shape then, I'm not even in that good shape now. I didn't try to be in that good shape."

Britain also won gold in the mixed 4x100m medley relay, breaking the European record in the process.

Women's Hockey World Cup

NETHERLANDS were crowned Women's Hockey World Cup winners for a record eighth as they overwhelmed Ireland 6-0 to end their fairytale tournament.

Four goals in a seven-minute spell around the halftime break earned the Dutch a commanding victory.

Minnows Ireland had won a raft of new fans on their unlikely road to the final, but had no answer to their opponents' intensity and class.

the final is an expected climb into the top of the world rankings for the first time.

The Dutch extended their unbeaten run in all competitions to 32 matches, and Kitty van Male finished as the tournament's top scorer.
